SMUGGLING DEVICES.

Baffled by Ingenious

Few evidences of human ingenuity are more interesting than the devices invented almost every day to baffle the detective skill of officers of customs. The smuggler is nowhere more wide awake than in the United States where he is at least a match for his enemies of the customs, and there are few days when he does not succeed in cheating them out of a few thousand dollars.

His chief object is to evade the duty imposed on imported diamonds, and he has many ways of doing this successfully. By several ingenious de vices he can disguise the value of the diamonds he imports, so that stones which are worth $100 or $150 a sarat lose at least half their value and are assessed for duty at the lower rate. Thus, instead of paying $5,000 duty on a parcel of diamonds he escapes with a payment of $2,500.

The smuggler's principal device is to mount his diamonds in rings and brooches; but before mounting them he gives each stone a thin coating on the back of brown or yellow varnish, thus giving the purest white stones a yellowish tinge, and reducing their apparent value by 50 to 75 per cent. Another successful plan is to subject the stones to heat until the brilliant surface is clouded and takes on a dull, grayish appearance. The valuable stones, thus deprived of their lustre, are mixed with a number of diamonds of the poorest quality and the entire parcel is passed as bish," at a value of $10,000 or $15,000 less than their actual worth. A little polishing soon restores the burned stones to their original lustre with loss of weight which bears no proportion to the amount of money saved in duty.

The Paris smuggler is little, if at all, behind his American rival in ingenuity, and his devices, on the evi-dence of M. Camille Simon, are worthy of the most crafty Chinaman. A short time ago a brougham, with an imposing coachman in livery, and conveying what appeared to be an invalid gentleman, was stopped at the Porto Dauphine. The brougham had passed at the same hour every day for months until at last suspicion was aroused. On investigation the customs officers found that the invalid gentleman was a zinc dummy, and that the brougham was full of ingenious receptacles for the smuggling of alcohol.

Not long before the authorities re ceived secret information that on a certain day a wedding party would enter Paris by one of the gates, and that it might be worth while to subject it to scrutiny. On the day and at the hour indicated a long file of landaus was seen approaching the gate. The first carriage contained the blushing bride and bridegroom, and the other carriages were crowded with wedding guests in uproarious spirits becoming to the occasion.

The procession was stopped at the gate, in spite of the indignant protests of the guests and the tears of the bride, and a thorough search resulted in the discovery that the landaus were even more full of spirits than the wedding guests themselves. In the hollow shafts, seats and even in the harness were concealed 250 liters of pure alco hol. Landaus and guests continued their journey with sadly diminished

The Smugglers' Museum at the Hotel de Villa, Paris, is full of the most extraordinary devices for defrauding the revenue. Nothing is sacred to the smuggler, as is proved by a collection of the collection of the smuggler, as is proved by a collection of the collection of the sacred to the smuggler, as is proved by a collection of the c smuggler, as is proved by a collection of mortuary wreaths, each of which is a cunningly devised receptacle for spirits. False busts, hips, legs and ab-domens have all held contraband goods, there is a mason's hod hollowed for their concealment, hollow axles, wheels, shafts, advocates' cases, books -in fact, almost every device that practiced ingenuity can suggest. The most amusing attempt to cheat the cystoms, according to M. Simon, was made by two men disguised as countrymen. One evening three men were seen approaching the Menilmon tant barrier, uproariously drunk. The middle man, who was unable to walk was supported by his two companions, scarcely less drunk than himself.

The customs officers, amused at the spectacle, began to chaff the drunken men, and one of them playfully gave the middle man a dig in the which, to the officer's amazement, caused the man no collapse and his companions to bolt in alarm. The cause of their flight was quickly apparent for the drunken man was of India rub ber, and his intoxication was suffi ciently explained by the fact that he was full to the crown of his head. with pure alcohol.-New York Times.

Silencing a Gun.

A gun is silenced when the gunners are disabled or driven back and the gun or gun carriage damaged. It is a enough phenomenon for weapons which have thus been silenced to reopen are after repairs have been made, the gunners rallied, or a fresh gur. rew obtained. It is a rare thing for gun to be so damaged by hostile fire that it cannot be refitted and brought into action again. "I saw," says Prince Kraft, of the German artillery. in the battle of Gravelotte, "many guns during the cannonade lying miserably on the ground 'winged,' that is, with broken wheel. But not one was withdrawn; the injured guns were always speedily repaired with the help of the wagons, which were near, so that at the close of the battle I could not tell exactly how many pieces had been but temporarily out of action."

ever had," said an old reporter, "was one to cover a fire in the building of the paper I was on. I was working fit that was up to date to the very last detail. Part of its building equipment was an automatic fire-alarm telegraph system, with wires in every room in the building. By this system an alarm was sent in automatically whenever the temperature of a room got above a certain degree. We were connected with the Fire Department wires, and had a special building call; so you see that as far as protecting ourselves from damage by fire was concerned we had taken every precaution we could, and had got the thing down so fine that the building itself, so to speak, rang the alarm.

"The Comet office was on a corner. On the next corner above in our street there was an engine-house, in which were housed a fire-engine and a hook and ladder truck. When there was a fire below us, further downtown, used to see the engine and the truck go ripping and tearing down past our office like mad. Sometimes when they went past like that they'd be back in a minute-false alarm; and then it might be an hour or two or more before we'd see or hear either of them, trotting back after a vigorous rastle with the fire.

"One day, when the fire-engine came a-rippin' and tearin' down the street in the usual way, with everything b'ilin', instead of going by, the first thing you knew the driver had hauled his team back on their haunches at a hydrant right in front of the Comet office, and the next instant they were vanking out a length of suction pipe. and there were men making spanners fly at both ends of it, engine and hydrant, coupling on, and more men coupling on hose and stretching it away on the other side, while at the same time the truck was wedging its way down into the street to the north, at our corner.

"H-m-m,' says the city editor, looking out from his seat by the window. 'I should imagine the fire must be somewhere near here.' "Also at the same instant or thereaouts a telephone bell, in where we kept the telephones, in one end of the equaled by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which has saved thousands from desperate Throat and Lung troubles. "All Coctors said my wife would soon die of Consumption." writes L. C. Overstreet, of Elgin, Tenn., "but your wonderfur medicine completely sured her, and saved her life." Satisfaction is guaranteed by A. reporters' room, began to jingle, and in a moment a boy comes out and walks across the room to the city desk and says to the city editor:

"Special building call from the Comet office,' And here's where I came in. The city editor looked up and sees me there, and says: "'Mr. Oldtime, there's a special building call from the Comet office; will you see what there is in that? don't believe you'll need a fire badge.

"This last, of ccurse, about the fire badge was just a small joke. You see, they always keep a supply of fire badges at the city desk, and these are issued to the reporters when they go to fires to enable them to get inside the fire lines established by the police; and then when the reporters come back they turn their fire badges in to the city desk again. But the city editor thought I wouldn't need a fire badge to get inside the lines here; we being, as you might say, inside of them already. But the jolliest part of it all, so far, was the way we got the news of the fire. The fire itself couldn't have been more than a hundred feet away at the outside from where ut we'd got the first news of it from a point a mile away, from our reporter at Police Headquarters. Well, I set out on my fire assignment, mounting to the top floor of the building and then worked down to the basement, where, as I found, the fire had been. It hadn't amounted to anything; some waste paper stripped from rolls of paper that was being wetted in the wettirg machines for the of Seneca, Ill., when all doctors and medicines failed to relieve his pain from piles. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured him. Infallible for Injuries, Pains or Bodily Eruptions. presses had taken fire somehow, and had just happened to throw up a little flame right under one of those automatic contrivances, and so started the fire alarm. It had been only a handful of fire, and it had been out for minutes before I got there; and the last of the glazed hats of the firemen was disappearing at the moment of my arrival.

"'A little bunch of paper a-fire in the basement; no damage,' I reported to the city editor. "'All right!' says the city editor.

'I guess we don't want anything about "Ouside in the street, they were unoupling the engine from the hydrant in front of the office, and up at the corner they were backing the truck up to get it out of that narrow street; in a minute they were both gone, and things were back at normal. "An easy assignment, and interesting, too."

Family Life a Bore. "Family life bores the modern Amerfcan girl," writes "An American Mother," in the April Ladies' Home Jour-nal. "She boasts that she has climbed to higher levels. She has done with needles, pots and pans, and-cradles. The world is her field of action; it is waiting for her; its crops are white unto the harvest. If she has money she usually begins to reap by going to Europe. She is there to-day by the thousands and tens of thousands. If the modern girl marries, her life is but little altered. She drifts here and there like rags of seaweed on the heaving waves. She does not want a home unless she has money enough to have two or three, in which, with a crop of servants and an English housekeeper in command, she can have house par-ties the year round. If she have money she lives in a huge hotel; if poor, in a cheap boarding-house. Her children are brought up on the stairs. There is not much of the cachet of the altar about that home for them. Presently she, too, goes abroad. She tells her friends that she is on the verge of nerve-prostration, which is usually true, and that Europe is the only chance of cure, which is not true. Her husband stays at home to drudge for the money which she spends."

The social system among the Moros is much more primitive than it is among the greater part of the other Philippine races. Another story which shows well the authority of the dato over his people is worth the telling. It seems that a blacksmith had been making love in a quiet way to a member of the harem of Dato Jokanine. Jokanine knew of this, and came to the man's smithy one day. The smith was just finishing off

What does it profit a woman if she whole world of knowledge and lose her own health? Young women students, own health? Young women students, and school teachers, eager, ambitious, and full of energy, very often neglect their health in the struggle to gain education. They eat insufficient food, and at irregular hours, they allow irregularity of the womanly functions to be established, and the result is that they become chronic invalids with that they become chronic invalids with all their education practically worth-less. There is a plain road back to health for such as these, marked by the feet of thousands. It is the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovof Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for diseases of the stomath and digestive and nutritive organs, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for diseases of the delicate organs of womanhood. A cure so certainly follows the use of these remedies that out of hundreds of thousands who have tried the treatment, ninety-eight in every hundred have been perfectly and permanently cured.
