"I feel as if I should fly to pieces," How often those words are on a woman's lips. They express to the uttermost the nerve racked condition of the body, which makes life a daily martyrdom.

If this condition had come suddenly it would have been unbearable. But the transition was gradual. A little more strain each day on the nerves. A little more drain each day on the vitality. Any woman would be glad indeed to be sid of such a condition. Every woman tries to be rid of it. The Chancellor of the Exchequer in his budget speech estimated the yield of the death duties for the financia year ending March 31, 1903, at a mil-hion less than in the year ended March 31, 1902, when the revenue from this source—the largest ever obtained—was £18,513,714. The amount received in $0.000 the excess in the following year was due to the payment of duty on Baron de Hirsch's shares in the Jew-ish Colonization Society—in respect of which there had been prolonged litigation—and to the arrangement of duty on Baron de Hirsch's shares in the Jew-ish Colonization Society—in respect of which there had been prolonged litigation—and to the arrangement that had been prolonged. that here had been prolonged liftga-tion—and to the arrangement which the Chancellor of the Exchequer explained that he had made "to clear up a good many outstanding arrears for the bene-fit not only of the Exchequer, but also of the parties concerned." The receipts from the death duties up to the present time are nearly as much as in the corresponding period of last year; and it seems probable that instead of a decrease of a million, which the late Charselle of the control of the late Charselle of the control of the late Charselle of the late Charselle of the late the late Charselle of the late Charselle of the late Charselle of the late the late of the lat the late Chancellor of the Exchequer the late Chancellor of the Exchequer estimated, his successor will have to report a gain on the estimate of three-quarters of a million, or perhaps even a million.

The motorman is exposed to the weather, which is severely felt at high speed. The inefficiency of air-brake power and claims for higher wages, were the other demands of the carmen. The average is under two and a half millions each; it is to be horne in mind, however, that these are sworn Cables In Melbourne. In Melbourne trams are entirely cable and a private company has a lease of the streets for 14 years—now nearly expired. Being cable, no great speed is attained, but when the company's levied and paid, and that the valuations do not usually include settled estates in which the deceased had only a life interest. Thus Sir Robert Loder, whose own estate was under £20,000, had power of appointment of £1,500,000, and the late Duke of Westminster's own estate was under a million, although the settled estate which passed on his death was probably worth ten or twelve times as much. We hear from is attained, but when the company's franchise expires the Government will convert the lines to underground wire convert the lines to underground wire electric, having already the cable channels to use. It will then be one of the finest systems in the world. Fares at present are three pence (six cents) any distance, but when the Govdeath was probably worth ten or twelve times as much. We hear from time to time from the United States ernment take them over, the fares will be considerably reduced. Brisbane and Adelaide, the third and fourth largest cities of the Commonwealth, have both Government street to be ten twenty, or fifty millions each. It is probable that there may be two or three very rich men in the United States who have the disposal of greater fortunes than any individual in this country has at his own absolute

It does not follow that because such a proposition as a street car system can be run advantageously by a gov-ernment or municipality, long dis-tance railways come under the same category. For a long time the Government railways of Australia, running many thousands of miles, were not paying, but the Victorian section has now a very fine man over from New York, and he has made a great difference in the balance sheets of that section.

ity of people generally about stories of wealth is unbounded. So far as a careful student of wealth statistics can form an opinion, the number of people in the United States worth $500,000 each is not likely to be greater than the number of those in the United Kingdom worth £100,000 each. But an "estimate" at $500,000 on the other side often gets changed in £500,000 in the course of transmission to this country.—London Telegraph. As car services I have seen in America, the Los Angeles Railway Co., own-ed by Mr. Huntington, once largely in-terested in the Southern Pacific Rail-way, is the finest. The rolling stock way, is the finest. The rolling stock is heavier than Sydney's, in fact, almost like steam railways, and the distances run from the city further and speed greater than Sydney's system. I have traveled at 46 miles an hour on a Los Angeles ear. With that exception nothing comes up to Sydney.
