Brother Anslow should apologize, like a man, to the gentleman he has practically called a perjurer by contradicting his sworn testimony. There is no question of evading any law. The only question is a difference of opinion as to what the law is. The Canada Temperance Act condemns the sale of liquor, directly or indirectly. Is the club's method of dividing its liquors among its members, in proportion to the the club's method of dividing its liquors among its members, in proportion to the amount each pays into the club treasury, liquor selling? This is the legal question at issue. The Attorney General and Mr. Pugsley, Q. C., have said no. The lawyers have cited a decision in the Queen's Bench in support of their opinion. The Police Magistrate has given some reasons, already reviewed by us, in support of his. It remains now for the Supreme Court. if It remains now for the Supreme Court, if the question can be got before it, to say what the law is.
