A Berlin cable to the World, says: "According to a rumour current, the grandest military spectacle ever organized by the Kaiser will be during the visit of King George and Queen Mary to Berlin next spring. The spectacle will be the last stages of the battle of Waterloo according to the German version. The troops engaged will wear historic uniforms and be furnished with the weapons of 1815. There will be a march past of detachments of all the regiments that historically fought side by side with the British troops during the various periods of history, the idea being to impress on the public mind the lesson of ancient friendship and comradeship in arms."

LONDON, July 29.
The dockers strike, which was called early in May, and caused 50,000 dock workers and their families to live in a state of semi-starvation for ten weeks, was declared at an end Saturday, by the Strike Committee. Work will be resumed Monday. The strike, which involved dock laborers, lightermen and other branches of labour, and has caused so much distress in the shipping district of London, was brought about by a dispute between workmen and their employers over the engagement of a non-union worker—a foreman, who refused to join the union. The men refusing to work under his orders were locked out. Watson, President of the International Seamen's Union, tried to organize a national strike, but failed. In consequence, the Strike Committee decided work should be resumed.

Notes From the Ancient Capilat.

The cod trap season at Cape St. Mary's and Golden Bay is now practically over, and it is the worst for many years.
There will be good crops of hay, cabbage and turnips, but there will be a great shortage in the potato crop owing to the canker being prevalent in the ground in many places. Only a very few seed potatoes and other small seeds were distributed here by Mr. Devreux, M. H. A. this year. My friend, Uncle Podger, who has a penchant for poetry although he doesn't know an anapestic from a trochaic line, and makes what Tim Shannahan calls wooden poetry, has composed the following lines re the matter:
Old Mother Ceres must have laughed in her sleeve
At the antics of Dick Devro with his agriculture seeds being prevalent in the ground in many places.
Seven and a half potatoes was each farmer's share.
And a handful of small seeds
Was all he had to spare.

From this generous distribution Many benefits were to flow. But the potatoes took the canker And the small seed didn't grow.
The ceremony of laying the corner stone of the New Boys' Academy took place here at 3 p.m. on Sunday last at the presence of a large assemblage of people and many priests. The building when completed will cost about three thousand dollars, and will be a credit to the people and their esteemed pastor, Mons. Reardon. His Grace Archbishop Howley addressed the people on the great boon of religious education, and represented the fact that some men in this country were trying to establish non-secretarian schools. He quoted many eminent authorities of different creeds to show the great value which the product of godless schools was producing in society and the world over.

Whilst listening to the eloquent discourse of His Grace on education, thoughts reverted to the very able speech of the Hon. M. P. Gibbs delivered in the Legislative Council last winter on the Council of Higher Education, and the merits of religious education in schools. I think that speech is one that every right thinking and god-fearing man should feel proud of. It should be printed in pamphlet form and distributed broadcast throughout the country. I was expecting something similar from the able and learned editor of the Chronicle, but I was sadly disappointed. I appreciated Mr. Gibbs remarks re the Council of Higher Education. I have had some experience of the Council of Higher Education and I must say I am a great believer in it. Since its inception there has been a great educational awakening, so much so that the remotest settlement in the island has felt its influence.

Prior to the establishment of the Council of Higher Education the irregularity of attendance had a baneful effect upon outport schools, but the Council of Higher Education has been an important factor in eliminating this great evil. The C. H. E. exams create a great rivalry among the children, among the teachers in each parish, and it has a great effect on the parents in the way of sending their children regularly to school. It also creates a wholesome influence among the different denominations for first place in the different grades. There is a certain amount of pride in the make-up of every one of us, and consequently children, teachers and parents will do all in their power to make a good showing at the exams. Abolish the Council of Higher Education and you eliminate all these factors which have helped in a great measure to raise the standard of education in our schools. This system of the examination sifts the brains of the community, and gives the poor man's child a chance. I have known people to be opposed to the C. H. E. exams, because the poor class of children who had more ability surpassed those higher in the social scale at the exams. The C. H. E. may not be perfect; no institution is perfect, and no doubt some of the criticisms to which it was subjected were justifiable, but there is no denying the fact that it has done a great deal of good, and has justified its existence. It is easy to tear down but takes men of great talent to build up. In my opinion the abolition of any of the Grades of the C. H. E. would be a step in the wrong direction and would be apt to lead to that educational apathy so characteristic of former years.

The genial Capt. T. Fitzpatrick has now settled down to work in his new position of Sub-Collector. While begrudging the gallant captain his good position, yet I think the time has come when civil servants should be remunerated according to the work they have to do.

The officers of Sub-Collector and Tide Water in outports in this country are almost sinecures. There is scarcely anything to be done, and if they were merged into one throughout the country the occupants would still have very little to do, and thousands of dollars would be thus saved. It is true for Mr. Jackman that we have the trappings of an elephant on a cat. The esteemed captain was remarkable for his quadrennial ebullitions of patriotism, and now that he is enjoying the sweets of office, I trust that he will be animated by the same spirit, and endeavour to the best of his ability to abolish the many useless offices which are surely sapping the life blood of this Colony.

The people are indignant at being denied the privilege of netting salmon on inside Gut, and I fear the enforcing of this law will result on someone's head other than the Game Board at St. John's. The people have enjoyed this privilege for centuries, and it is only natural to expect that they resent bitterly this cruel wrong. They say such a state of affairs would not be tolerated for a moment if Jackman were in power. He would not allow the Game Board to usurp the place of the representatives. Uncle Podger says:
Placenta sighs for Jackman,
That patriot tried and true,
The best and ablest member
The Ancient Capital ever knew;
His record as our Chancellor
No one can dare impeach.
For eight years he had a surplus
To grace his budget speech.
CASTLE HILL,
Placenta, July 24th, 1912.
