Why Should
We Celebrate.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—We have recently seen in the daily papers references to the 4th of August as the anniversary of the opening of the great war now devastating the European continent, and in one or two cases it was proposed that it would be fitting that some celebration should take place on that date in honor of this event. I have no desire, Mr. Editor, to be classed amongst that large section of the community that are called pessimists, nor do I wish to withhold my thanks and gratitude to the Ruler of the world who has so far allowed us as a community to escape from the immediate horrors of this great calamity that is at present deluging in blood those unhappy countries that are at strife, but I would ask in all sincerity why we, or for the matter of that, anyone in sympathy with the Allies should rejoice over or celebrate on the 4th of August as the anniversary of the date on which this unhappy war began. What is there to rejoice about? What has happened since the 4th August last to call for any celebration on our part? We have seen the whole of Belgium laid waste, and at present in the hands of the relentless invader after the people of that unhappy country had been subjected to the most awful outrages and deaths; we have seen a large portion of fair France overrun by the same savage foe, whose track has been marked by death and desolation; we have seen within the past few months the greater part of Poland under the heel of the same ruthless enemy, and we know that close upon ten millions of human beings are either killed, wounded or missing as a consequence of this war. Is there anything for us to rejoice over looking at such a picture, and then again, what have the Allies so far accomplished that we should rejoice? I do not mean for one moment by this question to imply that the Allies have been idle, on the contrary I am prepared to admit that considering our unpreparedness at the outbreak of the war we owe much to them, but will the most enthusiastic of us say that we should yet celebrate as victors. When this cruel war ends with victory on our banner, as I believe it will, when Germany is put out of danger for ever in the future, and the Kaiser and his blood-thirsty satellites have been transported to their prisons and their graves, it will then be time enough for us to celebrate the anniversary of the 4th August, 1914. In the meantime let us confine our celebrations to our churches, where we can ask for guidance and help from Him who controls all our destinies.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

Ireland's Gift to the Allies is Substantial.

Twelve Thousand Men Joined the Colors in One Day—An Irish Division Now at the Front.

Refutation of the pro-German propagandists' statement that Ireland is not supplying its quota of soldiery to the ranks of the British army is contained in the account in the Freeman's Journal, of Dublin, of the great demonstration at Warrenpoint, County Down, on July 7. In its editorial commenting upon the demonstration the Freeman's Journal says:

"Among the speeches delivered that of Lieut. W. A. Redmond, M.P., impress the fact that cannot too often be repeated—that Ireland's stake in this war is certainly as great and and quickly disappears—catarrh of long standing is invariably cured because Catarrhoxone kills the germs that cause the trouble.

As a cure for Asthma and a preventative of Grippe every doctor is delighted with Catarrhoxone. One eminent throat specialist says if Catarrhoxone is used two or three times each day you will never suffer from any disease of the head, throat, nose or lungs. This is good news to many of our readers who must require a safe, sure and permanent cure for their colds and winter ills. Every good druggist sells Catarrhoxone, large bottle 21.00; small also 50c.

Medicated Air A Marvel!

Catarrhoxone is far superior to any internal medicine.

Its relief is almost instantaneous—just takes long enough to breathe its healing vapor into the lungs to give wonderful soothing relief.

Catarrhoxone goes right to the finest cells in the lungs, carrying healing, soothing balsams to the places that are tainted with Catarrhal inflammation. A sneezing cold is cured in ten minutes—a sore throat is healed and restored in an hour or two—precious as that of Great Britain. We all know something of her contribution to the forces that are battling against the brutal aggression of Germany, of the splendid sacrifices she has made of the fresh lustre that the tradition of Irish gallantry has received from the daring and dash of the men who have been fighting in France and Flanders and the Dardanelles. But few of us were in a position to measure with anything like accuracy the full extent of Ireland's more recent and prospective contributions.

Gen. Friend, commander in chief of the forces threw some light on this matter last night. The statement is a revelation. The tenth division is now on its way to the front; the Thirty-sixth division, commanded by General Powell, leaves immediately for England preparatory to going to the front, and the Sixteenth division, commanded by Gen. Sir Laurence Parsons, is approaching completion. It would have been completed long ago but that responding with an alacrity to sudden emergency which Gen. Friend gratefully acknowledges, thousands of the men in the division joined other regiments for immediate active service. At the conference held in the early part of the day the number of men was given as 12,000 and Gen. Parsons stated that all were most anxious to be in the fighting line at once.

"Apart from the divisions raised in Ireland are the men forming the reserve battalions, in which Gen. Friend is especially interested. To fill the gaps in the regiments abroad they have been going out in batches during the last eleven months, and in this way no fewer than 23,000 men have left. When to these facts and figures are added the Irish cavalry regiments, artillery and engineers, army service corps and royal army medical corps, a just idea can be formed of the extent of Ireland's offering to the cause of the Allies."

THE BARBER.

When to the barber's shop I wander, I always feel a total loss, with whiskers sticking here and yonder, till they'd disgrace a Chinese joss. And as he shaves the barber whistles, or hums some cheerful, lifting air, the while he amputates the bristles, and spreads some tonic on my hair. He does not talk to me or bore me, this most discreet of workmen; he sprinkles talcum powder o'er me, and hopes that I will call again. When from his shop, all shaved, I sally, my self-respect again is high; I don't go sneaking down the alley, or slum the keen-eyed passer-by. I'm conscious of a transformation, no more I feel like twenty cents, I ornament my sex and station, I will compare with other gens. If barbers ceased their helpful labors, and failed us in the hour of need, then you and I and all our neighbors would lose our grip and go to seed. We would descend to low condition, and in the stinks of sloth abide, for whiskers kill all sane ambition, they're fatal to an honest pride.

YOUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Precocious children are, as a rule, heavier and dull children lighter, than the average child of the same age. Precocious children are taller and have larger chests and wider heads than backward children.

No child who's weight is below the normal standard for his age should be permitted to enter a school grade that an average child of his age attends, except after such a physical examination as shall satisfy the physician that the child's strength will be equal to the strain. Here the connection between physical and mental conditions is very plain. Physical weakness often produces an abnormal mental state.

In illness or convalescence, or when suffering from hunger or fatigue, most of us are more irritable than when we have our full strength. Selfishness, untruthfulness, ill temper and the like very frequently have a pathological basis.

Brawny Norwegians.

They Are the Longest Lived People in the World To-day.

The fine stature and unique physical qualities of the athletic Norsemen are thus described by Price Collier in an article on “Norway and the Norwegians, From an American Point of View,” in Scribner's Magazine.

“The so-called border, or agricultural passivity, from the very backbone of the nation in Norway. Each is proprietor of his own farm, and they occupy the country from the shore of the sea to the foot of the hills and up every glen or valley as far as corn will grow. They are, as a rule, fine looking, athletic men, as their properties are not so large as to exempt them from work, but large enough to supply them and their families with wholesome food. In the old days they built their own houses, made their own furniture, plows, carts, harness, ironwork, woodwork and basketwork. Probably there are no communities anywhere else in the world so self-efficient, so independent and so comfortable.

“Indeed, their size and wholesome aspect prove this, for they are the fairest, tallest, broadest chested and longest lived people in the world to-day.

In the streets of the towns, at the farms, on the roads, one seldom sees a fat man or one who looks unwieldy. They are sturdily, sometimes heavily, built, but they are lean in the flank, broad of shoulder and thick through, and, though they do not always carry themselves lightly or gracefully, they look to have plenty of room for the working machinery of living, for heart and lungs and digestive apparatus. Wherever you go in Norway, from Christiansand to the North Cape, you cannot go far without going up and down hill, nor can you go far without inhaling the champagne-like mountain air. It is not impossible that the plain food—a necessity in a poor country—the physical training in the schools, the obligatory military training, the sensible temperance legislation, the up and down hill exercise, the almost entire lack of luxury and the fact that they are not hard workers—not lazy, perhaps, but certainly leisurely in their toil, seldom making any undue demand upon their nervous energy—have produced what no artificial legislation can copy.”

Sydney to Contribute Eight Machine Guns.

Sydney, N.S., July 28.—As a result of a movement started less than a week ago in Sydney, funds for the purchase of eight machine guns are now in sight. F. A. Crowell, a public spirited merchant, undertook a few days ago to raise subscriptions and the following result was announced to-day as a beginning:

Crowell's, Ltd., one machine gun; Henry McArel, of Grace Bay, one machine gun; F. A. Crowell, one machine gun; Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McLennan, one machine gun; J. F. Miles and F. A. DeYoung, one machine gun; J. Finn, Port Morein, half cost of one machine gun; Isaac Grenwell, $100; Robert Reid, $100.

In addition to these the Royal Cape Breton Yacht Club and the local L. O. L. Lodge have also decided to contribute machine guns.
