

Miss Mollie Allen Tells How Cuticura Healed Eczema

"Eczema broke out on my face and neck, and I was unable to keep my face clean. Little white pimples formed which contained a watery fluid, and upon scratching would leave a burning sensation, growing worse all the time. The eczema scattered and all limbs got so bad and discharged so much watery fluid that my clothes were wet all the time. I had to keep my limbs wrapped in oiled silk."

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they gave me great relief, and after using three boxes of Soap and six boxes of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Mollie Allen, 2074, Telegraph Ave., Oakland, Calif., U.S.A.

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; — or the — Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER XXII.

Allan tried to thank him; and the earl knew that there was real deep gratitude in the few broken words.

"Come to us on Thursday, Captain Osburn," said the earl. "We shall have another party of guests by then, and you will meet some very agreeable people."

"One might be always sure of that at Chandos," replied Allan. "I think you have the happy knack of gathering very pleasant people round you. I shall be delighted to come on Thursday."

When he left Lord Caledon, he was almost beside himself with happiness. On Thursday he was to be with Iris, live under the same roof with her, see her nearly every hour of the day.

"Heaven bless the earl!" he cried in the fulness of his joy. "He is the kindest man I have ever met. I can never thank him enough. He must see that I love his daughter—may, that I worship even the ground on which she stands—and his invitation to Chandos shows that he does not object to me as a suitor. If I try to win that on which my heart is fixed, I shall find no foe in him."

When Allan told John Bardon that he was going to stay at Chandos for a few days, the master of Hype Court smiled.

"I am heartily glad to hear it," he said; "and I think better of the earl than I have ever done."

When he reported the news to Lady Alice afterward, John Bardon added—"You may be quite sure that all will soon be settled now."

"And then the part you have played will be disclosed," she replied.

"I have borne worse troubles than that," he said, grimly. Captain Osburn could not quite understand his host. His eyes followed him with a strange, wistful look, and he seemed to be always on the point of saying something to him. He had lost much of his geniality and was generally to be seen with a thoughtful, sullen face and knitted brows. He was greatly changed from what he was when Allan first knew him.

The young soldier had not much leisure to devote to him; still he was a little puzzled by his strange ways and rumors. At times John Bardon seemed foolishly fond of him; and then again he seemed to dislike him, and spoke to him almost impatiently and harshly. He could not account for such capriciousness, he did not know that in John Bardon's mind there was a continual struggle between his affection for him and his evil desire for revenge.

Lord Caledon was sure that what he had done would please his daughter.

"Iris," he said to her, "I know we have many visitors, and we shall have more next week; but is one of the best bedrooms unoccupied?"

"I will ask, papa," she replied.

"For whom do you want it?"

"For a friend of yours rather than of mine," he said, with a smile, carefully avoiding his daughter's eyes.

"I have asked Captain Osburn to spend a few days at Chandos before he goes away from the neighborhood, and he is coming on Thursday. Will you order the room to be prepared?"

There was silence for a few moments; and then, in a quiet, low voice, she answered—

"I am glad he is coming to see us, for he likes Chandos."

From that moment she thought of nothing else. The young soldier was coming to Chandos; they were to be under the same roof, and would be for whole days together. She did not think of the time when he would have to go away; the present was so bright that it dazzled her; she saw no further. She smiled to herself as she repeated the words, "He is coming on Thursday."

At length Thursday came. Captain Osburn was to reach Chandos in time for dinner; and she saw him for the first time in the drawing-room. He had taken unusual pains with her toilet. She wore a pale blue brocade trimmed with fine filmy lace; diamonds sparkled in her hair, on her white neck, and round her lovely arms.

They said but little when they met. Her hand lay for one moment in his; her face flushed, and her eyes fell. She murmured a few words of welcome, and then passed on to another guest. But, although she seldom looked at him and seldom spoke, she was intensely conscious of his presence. She seemed to hear every word he uttered, and followed his every movement, yet without giving the least sign.

It was the same with him; he followed every movement of the graceful figure, and envied every one to whom she stopped to speak; yet in his own mind he knew that her thoughts were all with him.

It was not until dinner was over and the guests were variously engaged that they found a few minutes' leisure. The night was beautiful; the moon was shining, and the air was full of perfume. Some of the party had gathered round the piano, where Laura Seymour, in her sweet sad contralto, was singing a love-song. Allan drew near to Lady Iris, and they stood side by side listening to the singer.

Her song was called "If," and the sweetness and the sadness of it went home so completely to both Allan and Lady Iris that they were lost to everything except the music and each other.

"If he would come to-day, to-day, O what a day to-day would be! But now he's away, long miles away from me, far away from me."

"O little bird flying, flying, flying To your nest in the warm west, Tell him as you pass that I am dying—As you pass home to your nest!"

"O, this weary world it is so cold, so cold, While I sit here all alone; I would not like to wait to grow old. But just to be dead and gone."

"Make me fair when I lie on my bed, Fair where I am lying; Perhaps he may come and look on me dead. He for whom I am dying."

"Dig my grave for two, with a stone to show it, And on the stone write my name; If he never comes I shall never know it. But sleep on all the same."

On looking into Lady Iris's face,

Allan saw that the bright, proud eyes were wet with tears.

"Why is it," she said, "that all love songs are so sad? I never hear one but that the burden of it is melancholy."

"I should imagine it is because there are not many happy loves," he answered. "I do not think a happy love is a common thing; the rule is that one loves another without hope of return. I have not thought much of love in my lifetime; but I should say that the most terrible pain a man can suffer is when he loves with his whole heart and loves in vain."

For a moment the face of John Bardon rose before her as she had seen it under the almond tree—distorted with passion and pain. Had he suffered so cruelly? Had she added to his sufferings by those cruel words "insult" and "sacrilege"? She tried to argue with herself that it could not be; and then she looked up anxiously at her companion.

"Do you think so? I have never thought of the pain of love."

"Yet," he said earnestly, "you must have inflicted much pain; so many have loved you and have loved you in vain."

She could not be angry; the words were spoken in all simplicity.

"I would never inflict pain wilfully," she replied; and again there rose before her the white and trembling lips of John Bardon. "If ever I have given pain, I have felt sorry for it," she added.

"I do not know myself," said Allan half sadly—"I have had but little experience—I may say none; but I have heard men who have suffered say that 'a beautiful woman is a scourge amongst men; so many love her, and she loves but one.'"

"Men are very wicked to say such things," replied Lady Iris; and yet in her heart she knew it was true. (To be continued.)

WHAT MADE ME HAPPY

"I was congratulating myself that I had passed the winter without catching a cold, when I got one at the beginning of last May. It was because I was run down. Being run down I had some trouble in getting rid of this cold. I was a nervous wreck. I would wake up regularly mornings feeling that some terrible calamity would take place. Although we were comfortably off, I felt sure my husband was going to lose everything. The children worried me. If they made the least noise, I would get into a terrible temper. I would scold them so that I am sure they hated me. I would be mad with myself after it was over and make up my mind never to let it happen again. I would go to bed at night and begin to think and picture dreadful things which might happen to me and my family. I would lay awake for hours, sometimes until daylight, until I was so weak that I could scarcely raise my head. I would waken next day just as tired as when I laid down. After a while I got so that I didn't care what happened. The children annoyed me and I wouldn't have cared if they had left me for good. I felt that it was only a matter of time before I would lose my mind. I knew that my symptoms were due to a run down condition and that if I could only get something to build me up, I might be all right. I knew that there must be some good tonic but most of them made such foolish claims that I was afraid of them. Happening one day to run across a leaflet about Carnol, I was impressed with the moderate way this preparation was described, so I made up my mind I would try it. I did and today I am the happiest and healthiest woman living. I haven't a care in the world. Instead of running away from me, my children are now with me all the time. My husband tells me that my disposition is as near an angel's as any human being's can be, but of course he is prejudiced. I don't believe I have a nerve in my body now."

Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money. 6-523

Wanted—a Rat Expert.

Any modern Pled Piper can have a job at Washington. Superintendent Elliott Woods will see that he gets well paid for his melodies. But he must make good. Rats are becoming so numerous at the Capitol as to be a pest. Shortly before adjournment, Congress appropriated $4,500 to exterminate the rodents. An expert was employed. He made liberal use of poison which, unfortunately, killed some of the rats but left their bodies scattered about the buildings. Thereupon the exterminator quit the job. There are regiments of rats left, and a new expert is wanted.

A PRETTY FROCK FOR SLENDER FIGURES.

4157. This is a good style for gabardine or French serge, with braid or embroidery for trimming. The dress is in slip on style, with the closing at the shoulders seams. The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 16, 18 and 20 years. An 18 year size requires 4 1/2 yards of 40 inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is 2 1/4 yards. Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. in silver or stamps.

A NEW COAT SUIT.

4145-3847. A smart and up-to-date suit style is here portrayed. The coat has semi-fitted lines, and the skirt is finished with plait sections on front and back. Broad cloth, velvet or tweed would be in good style for a suit of this kind, with simple stitching or binding of braid, for decoration.

The coat pattern 3847, is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. The skirt pattern 4145 in 6 sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33 and 35 inches waist measure. To make the suit for a medium size will require 5 1/2 yards of 54 inch material. The width of the skirt at the foot is 3 1/4 yards, with plait extended.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 10c. FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.
