New Device Will

Berlin, Dec. 7 .- A device to protect airmen from accidents such as recentperfected by Alexander Behm, a Ger- guarantee. dec2,13i,eod man physicist at Kiel.

Captain John V. Klemann, naval attache at the American Embassy, has sent a comprehensive report of Behm's device to his department in Washing ton. The contrivance is to guard airmen against the danger of encountering "shoal air" at night or during fogs. With Behm's Invention to aid him, an airman can determine instantly his height from the ground, thus protecting himself from driving headon into the rising slope of a mountain or brushing away the undercarriage of his plane in trees when visibility is such that he cannot look from his machine and know whether he is high Hitherto, aviators have been able exactly to determine their height only from sea level. Over rolling ground or mountains this height data was fallible as has been proven in a number of accidents.

Behm's device is called the "Behm echo lot," and makes use of the fact that sound reverberates. It consists of a sending and receiving mechanism. The sender contains a small cartridge. The pilot can discharge this cartridge at will. Its sound travels to the ground and returns upward where it registers on the receiver. This, of course, is a matter only of moments, and a scale on the receiver registers on terms of feet or yards the time required for the sound to travel to the earth and return.

The echo lot registers altitudes instantaneously and accurately to within one-tenth of a meter. The pilot has merely to discharge the cartridge and glance at the receiver's dial. He can repeat the test rapidly, so that it is ossible to know the exact height of a plane even while landing.

Trial flights aboard the ZR 3, now the Los Angeles, gave the first oppor tunity of a test of the invention. Sus cessful results were obtained then and subsequently the device has been develoyed so that it can be used aboard
