The Braes of Yarrow

An Historical Tale of the Sixteenth Century.

Hornie watched till he saw her safe beyond the gateway, and then he waddled into the kitchen with his ordinary grin of self-satisfied humour, as if he had been engaged in the most innocent pastime. The fore quarters of an ox were being roasted, and he tendered his services to turn the spit.

He was thus occupied when Yetholm Will appeared in a savage humour.

'Whar hae ye been, ye deil's got,' he growled, 'I have been seeking ye a' ower the house.'

'I have been visiting my father the deil, Will, an' he was speering whan ye were coming hame—haw, haw, haw.'

'Ye'll laugh to another tune or long. What hae ye done wi, the gipsy loon?'

'I gied him a broom an' sent him to sweep the lum, see that the first witch that came might hae a clear road for carrying ye awa.'

'We'll see if that answer will serve the master,' said Will, with a malicious grin: 'he's waiting for ye in the turret chamber.'

The dwarf paled slightly at this ominous intimation, but he responded with one of his loud guffaws—

'Body o' me, man, why did ye no say that the master wanted me before noo? Hey, cook, mind the spit yersel.'

With apparent alacrity he jumped to his feet to obey the summons of the chief. Will followed him as if to make sure of his purpose.

Tushelaw's visage was distorted with passion, and his dress disordered as if he had been hurriedly searching it for something, and had forgotten to arrange it again.

'So you are there at last,' he said hoarsely and scowling darkly upon the dwarf, who met the gaze with the utmost equanimity: 'where is the other?'

'He canna be found,' said Will, 'And Hornie will no tell me anything about him.'

'Where is the lad Kaza?' demanded Tushelaw addressing Hornie.

'Ye didna make Kaza my monkey or bid me gang about wi a string tied to his tail, so how should I ken where he is more than the others.'

'Hark ye, Hornie. Ye have had an easy life with me, and money a time when I have suspected you I have held my hand from braining you because ye were a poor deformed lump that I thought bound to my service. But by my hand, if ye speak not truly ye shall rue the day ye made a play with me.'

The dwarf gave his shoulders a shrug of indifference.

'I canna help that, master; if it be your will to choke me ye shall have the strength.'

'Where is the lad?'

'I canna tell.'

'What were you doing with him in this chamber?'

'Whan?'

'An hour syne.'

The dwarf looked into the chief's face as if surprised.

'Me here an hour syne?' he exclaimed.

'How could that be when ye ay keep the key yersel?'

'Ay, but to-day the key was stolen from my pouch, and Will saw ye both here seeking the dame's distaff, as ye said.'

Hornie coolly seized Will by the cuff and drew him over to the chief.

'Noe, Will, look me in the face,' he exclaimed with an air of honest indignation, 'and tell me that ye ever saw me in this chamber before, except when the master was present?'

'Ye ken weel that I saw ye and the other loon here, and ye were talking about treasures and searching behind the tapestry.'

'And ye ken that ye are leering and that ye are just trying to blacken me in the sight of the master.'

'I ken that I have spoken truth, and nought else.'

TO BE CONTINUED.

Have you corns that keep you in constant pain through the day, and deprive you of sleep at night? Use Briggs' Curative and they will soon disappear. Have you Bunions that are a constant source of annoyance, sending their increasing twinges forth with great fury, compelling you to cut your boot to make room for his louship, Mr. Bunion? Use Briggs' Curative and your Bunion will take a walk for its health. Have you ingrowing Nails that spoil your peace and your repose, on which many a foot has trod not lightly, causing you to fear any large boot that comes near you; thus it is an annoyance to be afflicted with such unwelcome torments of human existence? Use Briggs' Curative, according to directions, and your toe will soon be restored to its natural and healthy condition, and you a happy being.

A sad affair occurred in Owosso, Mich., a few days since. Two Saginaw ladies went thither to meet their aged parents, whom they had not seen for years. As the cars from the east, containing the old people, approached the depot, the mother caught sight of her daughter, and in her eagerness to embrace them, stumbled and fell. The cars ran over her, severing her head completely from her body.

Mr. Henry Michael Muldoon died at Toronto, on Saturday last, at the age of 32 years. The deceased was connected with the Press in Hamilton two years ago, and latterly with the Toronto Press. Mr. Muldoon was a member of King's Inn Dublin.
