ASSEMBLY DELEGATES

WOODSTOCK, June 7 .- The delegates to the assembly were given an outing yesterday in the form of a garden party, which was held on the Knox Church lawn at Embro, and was tendered by the adherents of Knox Church. Nearly 400 delegates were present and were delighted with reception that they received in that historic village in the heart of West Zorra. Nearly every available conveyance in the city was called into service to convey the delegates to the scene of the festivities, which included 85 autos and numerous livery rigs. On reaching the village the party were given an address of welcome by the citizens Embro, which was delivered by John McLeod, a member of the sessions of Knox Church. The address was responded to in a very able manner by Dr. Herridge, the newly-elected moderator, who heartily thanked the citizens for the royal welcome they had

A dainty luncheon was served in the basement by the ladies of the congregation as only the ladies of Embro can serve and one of the delegates said after. "If they always treat you like this, believe I will come back and spend the remainder of my life here"

The entertainment committee that had completed the arrangements at this end also came in for considerable praise from the delegates for the very able manner in which everything was carried out, and one of the delegates who had attended a great many of the assembly gatherings, said that never before had he seen such good management in carrying out such a scheme for their entertainment.

AND TEARS HOUSE TO PIECES

East Zorra Woman Picked Up Dead and Husband Was Found Fatally Injured Some Distance Away.

WOODSTOCK, June 7.—Two people were killed and damage which will run into many thousands of dollars was caused tonight when a cyclone swept over East Zorra.

The dead are: Thomas Barclay, aged 84, and his wife, aged 60. Were Eating Supper.

The cyclone struck their house as they were eating supper. The building was torn to pieces in a few seconds and parts of the roof and framework were scattered for 200 yards around. Many of the timbers were hurled 50 feet in the air.

Allan Barker, a neighbor, who witnessed the wrecking of the house, rushed across as quickly as possible.

Carried Fifty Feet. He found Mrs. Barclay lying dead about 40 feet from where the house had stood. Her husband lay some distance away, in a pile of boards, with his leg fractured in three places and suffering from internal injuries and shock. He died a few minutes after Mr. Barker found him.

Their son, Thomas, had been visiting at a neighbor's, two Dr. R. P. MacKay, an ex-moderator miles away, and knew nothing of the tragedy until he hurried and an old Zorra boy, was elected to home. He was greatly affected when he found his parents dead. Hurled Seventy-Five Feet.

Miss Mary Robinson, who resided with Mr. and Mrs. Barclay, probably owes her life to the fact that she had gone out on the lawn a few minutes before the house was wrecked. After the Institute will be received at the office of from Zorra; Dr J. A. Macdonald, of blow was over she found herself in the stable yard on a manurepile. She thinks she was lifted bodily by the force of the wind and carried to the spot, which is about 75 feet from where she had been standing, but can remember little beyond the fact that there was a terrific roaring, and she felt herself caught in the

While the cyclone stretched over a length of over two miles, the wind seemed to reach its maximum velocity at the Barclay place.

Tree Trunk in Window. At the home of Henry Enthwistle, on an adjoining farm, a chimney on the house was blown down and the orchard badly damaged. After the storm part of a large tree trunk was found sticking through one of the upstair windows. All about telegrap poles were blown over and trees uprooted.

At W. J. Brown's place, parts of trees and fences were lifted and whirled high in the air. Some of the families in the vicinity, length of two miles or more, the wind had to be cancelled.

Several names were put in nomination, but Mr. Brackin was the unanimous choice of the delegates. All of the others retired in his favor, and he was given Algernon flushed a deep crimson, and his utter helplessness to prove his own dentity rushed over him. For a month he had masqueraded as his mother's chauffeur. Even Molly would hardly conceive it possible that he was Todd, a self-swindler. No one would believe it could believe it. o one would believe it. could Algernon thrust his hands swinder. No one would believe it. Could believe it. Algernon thrust his hands into his pockets and regarded the cool, imperturbable youth on the other side of the counter with an exasperated sneer. To claim to be Todd was not only impossible for the time, but foolish. He would have to continue as his chauffeur. "Send those C. O. "Can't do it," said the boy. "You ain't Todd."

"And me from the goositen stupidity of the city!" said the boy cheerfully.

Algernon felt hopelessly in all of his pockets. He knew that there was not a coin in any of them, but hoped with the senseless hope of desperation and despair to find one. The terrible oppression of absolute and complete pennilessness was awful, maddening, unbearable. Then he smiled with relief. "Lend me

Don't talk of borrowing between friends. "I shall leave you the car as security," pleaded Algernon.

The boy glanced out of the dingy door at the big, throbbing car in the narrow dusty street, already an object of pleasurable scrutiny to the village contingent of small boys, and grunted. "The car ain't yours," said he briefly.

"Mrs. Todd will pay you."

"Then why didn't she send the money in the first place?" Algernon looked at the youth a moment in silence, wondering how long he could restrain himself from laying violent hands on this servant of the public. Then his eye caught sight of the telephone, and
