LONDON, May 10.—Since the battle of Neuve Chapelle, France, and the German reply to it on the Ypres Canal, there has been no such important movement by the British and French armies in the western arena of the war as now is in progress, and, according to the official unications of both Gen. Joffre and Field Marshal Sir John French, the Allies are meeting with success.

Obviously the British have been able to throw great reinforcements into the field, since with the use of asphyxiating gases the Germans forces them to coil a fortnight ago. The substantial advance already reorded by the British is taken by military experts here as promising that the present operations will be pushed home. The British and French are attacking along a front of 26 miles, and the fighting which commenced on Sunday morning continues, according to today's official commun med in Paris, in favor of the Allies. (Canadian Press.)

QUEENSTOWN, May 10 .- 11:45 p.m. - Ninety-two passengers of the Cunard Line Steamship Lusitania, who formed part of the pitiful handful of maimed, dead and dying brought ashore with the survivors of the disaster, that followed the attack on the vessel by a German submarine last Friday, were buried this afternoon with services that have no parallel in history.

Under a sky in which not a single cloud floated, and to the strains of hymns played by British soldiers, they were laid to rest two miles behind Queenstown in a cemetery bursting with spring greenery and tucked between hills flaming with gorse. The services at the graves began at four o'clock, and at half-past four the sod of Ireland was being shoveled upon the coffins. Queenstown never sensed the full horror of the Lusitania disaster until today. Up to the time that the long stream of coffins began to disappear over the long hill behind the town there was losses. about the affair something of the unusual and theatrical. But as the funeral started the realization could not escape that each coffin held a body, and that in the Atlantic lay a thousand more dead, victims of a German submarine.
