Bartford, Conn., April 28.—The managers and umpires of the Eastern League heid a meeting to-day for the purpose of discussing the rules for the season of 1899. All the teams were represented except Providence and Rochester. President Powers assigned the umpires for the Saturday games. Several of the rules were discussed. In some rules, where an umpire is vested with power to impose fines, exceptions were taken, and it was voted to allow them to use their discretion in such cases. The subject which occupied the most time was with regard to balking. Rule 32, section 1, was changed to read as follows:—'Any motion made by the pitcher to deliver the ball to the batter or first base, without delivering it, shall be a balk." The last cause of the rule originally read:—'Or to a base without delivering it, shall be a look. EASTERN LEAGUE AND THE RULES ally read:—"Or to a base without delivering it shall be called a balk." It was also voted that a pitcher should be guilty of making a balk when he should motion to .714 deliver the ball to third base, should not to either first or second base. CKICKET.
