

Wall-Pocket for Magazines. To make the article represented in the engraving, procure a board twenty-one inches long and ten wide; have it sawed to the shape shown in the illustration, and cover with some pretty dark cloth or cretonne. Take two bands of ribbon each twenty-four inches long; or, if preferred, two bands of the material used for embroidery and tack them on the board, as shown in slight engraving, being care-

MAGAZINE HOLDER. Full size ribbon full enough to slip the papers between the board and the cover. Place a screw-eye at the top of the board to secure it to the wall and finish the ribbon ends with a small tassel. It is both serviceable and pretty.

The Care of Bread. There is no department of housekeeping that needs such vigilance to prevent waste as that of the table, and there is more waste in bread through lack of proper care than in any other provision. Emma Johnson gives some useful hints in the Homekeeper's Weekly on this subject, and first we take

BREAD BOXES. Bread boxes should be of tin. Never put bread away hot, or even warm. Do not throw loose bits of bread into the box. If pieces are left over they should be more than that of the table, and there is more waste in bread through lack of proper care than in any other provision. Emma Johnson gives some useful hints in the Homekeeper's Weekly on this subject, and first we take

BREAD CLOVES. Every housekeeper should have a good bread cloth. It should be of heavy linen or cotton, and be washed and well aired. Never let it get soiled with anything which it has to be used for. It should be changed often, and never used for anything else.

HOW TO CUT BREAD. Many persons are commonly awkward about cutting bread. In the first place, loaves should be baked in pans about half a yard in length and a little over an eighth of a yard in width, sloping slightly upward. Have for cutting a board longer than your loaf, and so wide as to extend over the crumb fall off. Place the loaf on the board, holding it down firmly with the left hand, and with a very sharp, small, thin-bladed knife slice the bread with your right hand, and so wide as to extend over the crumb fall off. Place the loaf on the board, holding it down firmly with the left hand, and with a very sharp, small, thin-bladed knife slice the bread with your right hand, and so wide as to extend over the crumb fall off.

BREAD SOAP. This should be made of unbleached muslin or thin linen. It should be hung in a dry cool place. Every second week overhaul the bag to watch for mould. If a large quantity of scraps are accumulated, dry them in a shallow tin, and roll them over in a cloth. The remainder should be used for making puddings and buns, or for soap. Crumbs should never be thrown away, but collected, dried and rolled over, or kept on hand to scatter to the birds in winter.

GRAHAM BREAD. Makes a delightful change, and is most bread set over night a sponge made of flour, in the same way as for wheat bread, only substituting half a cup of syrup or molasses for the sugar. In the morning fill in with the Graham flour till a dough is made. Then set to rise again. This method necessitates more frequent ratings, but I have found it the best plan. Graham dough takes longer to rise and a little longer to bake than wheat flour.

A Winter Still. The accompanying illustration shows an easy and effective way to prevent the freezing of hot water during cold weather. Dig a pit two feet deep and four feet square, in which place eighteen inches of straw, hot horse manure. On this place the barrel, and pack the heating material around the sides. The top is nearly reached. Then place a frame or box without a bottom over the barrel, with a cover which can be lifted up when the still is removed. Pack this box full with straw, and let little frost get in. A full quart of hot water poured in the barrel, when half filled, will make the pigs a warm drink at noon, which will be appreciated. The heat from wind and snow, the cold will have still less effect on it. There is no advantage in feeding from still; pure water is much better, and the hogs need all they want to drink.

Generating the Kitchen Sink. It is of cast iron and is cheap and non-porous, but it gets rusty and ugly, unless zinc-coated by the process of galvanizing. A zinc-lined wooden sink is an abolition. It gets foul in spite of soap, sand and scalding and is not durable. A lead sink of course means a lead-coated sink—generally of wood. It does not get rusty, but it does get wrinkled. Pewter dishes, etc., are broken in a lead-lined sink when in use, for obvious reasons. Will shake up any sink outlet on the market. We mean circumvent her by either making a means of raising the obnoxious ones in them. Many sinks are too small to take in a self-respecting dishwasher. It might be laid down as a broad general principle that cheap and begets good certain sizes; that roasts of mutton and beef come about certain sizes; that dishes have to be big enough to hold them; and that sinks should be big enough to take in the dishes which are to hold those dishes.

Recipes. Fried Boiled Eggs. Boil three hard-boiled eggs, dip in raw egg and bread crumbs, fry in butter, and serve on tiny appetizer of toast. Creamed Potatoes. Chop cold boiled potatoes fine, and put them into a saucepan with a little butter; add pepper and salt to taste; stir occasionally so as not to burn them; just before taking up, add a cup of rich sweet cream; pour a minute longer and serve.
