New Business in Three Months!
The Mutual Relief Society
—OF—
NOVA SCOTIA!
The members of the Society are hereby informed, that notwithstanding the keen competition offered by the large number of Life Insurance Companies which are so ably represented by their respective agents, an increase for the first three months of 1896, was $400,000.
This will compare very favorably with the amount of business done within Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, by any Life Insurance Company.
Members, with few exceptions, respond promptly when assessments are made.
The Society pays all its bonds in full on proof of claim.
Individuals desiring Insurance are invited to make a comparison between the merits of this Society and those of other companies, before giving an application. For particulars please write to, or see our agents.

might be intruding, came over to offer her services, said Helen would remain home from school if she could be useful. Mrs. Courtland remembered the breakfast conversation, and wished now that she had called when she saw that this woman, alone of all the neighbors dared to enter the house. Mrs. Waite always tried to do her duty, but now affection came in, for had not the sick boy been a noble friend to her Arthur?

Henry talked much in his delirium of the jolly bicycle rides in the country, and called for Arthur, but when he came, the bright eyes showed no look of recognition, and the boy went away nearly heart broken. The sickness was of short duration, and then the Courtlands buried their idol. Arthur brought back the bicycle, and it was on the door-step, and never rode upon it afterward.

"Mary," said Mr. Courtland after months had passed, such months as a man knows never dreamed of, "I've been thinking I'd like to adopt Arthur Waite. He is a warm-hearted boy, not so handsome as our Henry, but noble, and then, you know, our child loved him so well."

"Well, I'll call on the new people who have moved on to Deaver Street," said Isabel Courtland, as he slipped his coffee one morning at his handsome breakfast table.

"How absurd, Mr. Courtland!" she always called him "Mr." when she was in company with her mother, "what a philosophy," she called it. He had married his bright, ambitious wife with an expressed determination to make her happy, and, whether intentionally or not, she had acquired the power which early love gives one person over another, she managed to do as she liked, and quite often managed to have Mr. Courtland do as she liked.

"I expect to ask my father," said the brown-eyed, hollow-browed boy. "Don't you think I'll get one?" he said anxiously, slipping both hands round Mr. Courtland's arm.

"I'll call on the new people who have moved on to Deaver Street," said Isabel Courtland, as he slipped his coffee one morning at his handsome breakfast table.

Grand Haven.—We regret to hear that the Apostle of the Lepers of Malacca is beginning to pay the penalty of his heroism. Shut away from all civilized and healthy humanity, Father Damien has for years been a willing prisoner in the island in which he collected and confined the lepers of all the neighboring Sandwich group. For a long time, though cut off from the outside world, Father Damien continued in good health though alone among the dead. But the stroke has fallen at last. In a letter written recently he says: "Impossible for me to go any more Honolulu, on account of the leprosy breaking out on me. The microbes have finally settled themselves in my left leg and my ear, and one symptom begins to fail. I expect to have my face soon disfigured. Having no doubt myself of the true character of my disease, I feel calm, resigned and happier among my people. Alas! Alas! God knows what is best for my sanctification, and with that conviction I say daily a good Fiat voluntas tua." Where is the heroism which will live with this?—London Press.

Largest Jam in the World.—What has received into the largest log jam in the world formed in the falls of St. Croix at this place yesterday, says a Taylor's Falls (Minn.) dispatch, and the lumber-land place the amount not less than 140,000,000 feet and running in the rate of 1,000,000 feet per hour. The jam now extends from the levee in the Dalles to way above Tuttle's Falls, fully two miles. The oldest residents state that this is the largest jam ever formed in the Dalles, passing the first great jam of 1865. The jam is attracting hundreds of spectators from all parts of the country. It is a wonderful sight. The huge logs coming down in a wild current, plunging with a thundering noise under, over, and all about the wedged together logs in front, here snapping a monster in twain, or there a huge log splitting, and there tossing another 30 or more feet high in the air, and thus throwing from the starting place in the eddy a hopeless tangle up the river. Loggers say that under the most favorable circumstances it will take from 10 days to two weeks to break the jam. If the water should give out, the logs would have to remain there until another rise.—Boston Herald.

Beauty in Journalism.—We are not prepared to do much of the statement, recently made, that the newspapers are killing the magazines, just as magazines have killed books, but we were professional romancers that they are mistaken if they think that imagination is confined to men who write novels and poems. Only a few days ago our bright contemporary the Illustrated American told of a farmer who had planted a maple tree a hundred years old and found a live toad in the centre of it. Such a brilliant feat of imagination would stagger John Verne could he see it upon him, but it did not frighten him, and he was unshaken. The editor of that paper merely stated that he had never doubted the story had not seen a live toad taken from the centre of an apple tree which was unshaken. Novelists and magazine writers must not get on airs about superior identity if they do not wish journalists to show that they can disprove them in a single round.—N. Y. Herald.

About seventeen years ago a gentleman then living in Halifax, N. S., offered a considerable price to any person who would discover the name of David's mother. Bibles were got all over in great demand in Nova Scotia, and those who had not opened one for years became as diligent readers as the people who use the Bible for their guide to Heaven. Few, if any, found the name required. Mr. J. M. Robinson, then of Fall River, N. S., undertook to do so and continued his search with short intermissions up to last winter. During that time he was confined to his home, being confined by his illness, devoted much of his time to the subject, and he was successful. The records concerning David's mother were carefully followed without finding the name of the mother. The records of the French Revolution, before that time, whole villages supported themselves by lace making, and generations were handed down from one generation to another. They were very valuable heritages, for the most celebrated weavers always had as many orders as they could execute in a life-time, and they were bound by a oath taken on the four Gospels to work only for certain dealers. When the Reign of Terror began all of this kind of work was interrupted for a time. After the storm had subsided the dealers and workers were far apart—some dead, some lost and some escaped to foreign lands; and such of the women as remained were bound by their oath to work for but one; and this oath, in spite of Robespierre's doctrines, was held by the poorest of them to be binding, and there were however, taught their children and their grandmothers, and many patterns were in this way rescued. Some of the delicate and finest patterns were never recovered, and to-day specimens of these lace are known to be worth their weight in gold.—English papers.

Bad Error or Disease.—The influence of acid in rotting or screwing railway digestion is further of importance in the dietetic use of pickles, vinegars, salads and cold fruits. In the case of vinegar it was found that one part in 5,000 sensibly retarded the progress, a proportion of one in 1,000 retarded very slow and one in 500 arrested it completely; so that when acid salads are taken together with food the effect of the acid is to prevent any salivary digestion of the bread, a matter of little moment to a person with a vigorous digestion, but to a feeble dyspeptic one of some importance. There is a very widespread belief that drinking vinegar is an efficacious means of avoiding getting fat, and this popular belief would appear from these experiments to be well founded. If the vinegar be taken at the same time as farinaceous food it will interfere with its digestion and assimilation.

The British War Office has decided to adopt the machine gun for the army. Three-barrelled Nordenfildts, each weighing sixty pounds and firing 60 bullets in one minute, and five-barrelled guns of 120 pounds and firing 600 rounds a minute are being sent to Egypt and India. The twelve-barrelled gun that fires 1,200 rounds a minute, is being experimented with.
