MISS TOWSEY FROWSEY.

This is the name given to the little girl in the picture, and a very suitable name it is, too. She has pretty brown curly hair, but somehow it never looks nice because she hates to have it brushed. In the morning after she has put on her clothes she runs out to the swing before having her hair combed. If her mother does not watch her, she even hurries off to school with her hair tossed and untidy.

One day the teacher saw that it had not been combed, so she spoke to her about it, saying that little girls should always be neat and tidy. But Miss Towsey Frowsey was not a bit ashamed, and did not follow her kind teacher's advice about taking care to look nice. What a pity that any little girl should be careless about her looks.

THE RIDING LESSON.

Winnifred has gone to spend the summer on her Uncle George's farm. She lives in the city and so is always glad when the long summer holidays come that she can go to the country. She is very fond of the country, and takes great interest in learning about all the different things used on a farm.

She also likes to learn the names and uses of the different grains, and when she drives along the roads, tries to tell her uncle what is growing in each field. Sometimes she makes mistakes and says wheat is barley, or oats are rye, which amuses her big farmer-uncle; but he is always kind and patient, and corrects her mistakes.

What Winnifred likes best on the farm are the horses. Uncle George has a dear little grey pony called Fanny, on which Cousin Herbie is teaching her to ride. At first she was afraid, but finding the pony so gentle and Herb such a good teacher, she is not afraid any more, and is beginning to ride well.
