Liver Wile Lament of Flora M'Donald. By JAMES HOGG.

Far over the hills of the heather so green, And down by the Corrie that sings to the sea, The bonny young Flora sat weeping her lane,
The dew on her plaid and the tear in her e'e.
She look'd at a boat with the breezes that swung, Away on the wave like a bird on the main; and aye as it lessen'd she sigh'd and she sang, "Farewell to the lad I shall ne'er see again; Farewell to my hero, the gallant and young, Farewell to the lad I shall near see again.

The moorcock that crows on the brow o' Ben Con-

He kens o' his bed in a sweet mossy hame;
The eagle that soars o'er the cliffs of Clan-Rousld,
Unawed and unhunted his eiry can claim; The solan can sleep on his shelve on the shore: The cormorant roost on his rock of the sea:

But, oh! there is ane whose hard fate I deplore. Nor house, ha', nor hame, in his country has he; The conflict is past, and our name is no more, There's nought left; but sorrow for Scotland an'

The target is torn from the arms of the just, The helmet is cleft on the brow of the brave, The claymore forever in darkness must rust; But red is the sword of the stranger and slave : The hoof of the horse and the foot of the proud, Have trod o'er the plumes on the bonnet o' blue Why slept the red bolt in the breast of the cloud, When tyranny revelled in the blood of the true? Farewell, my young hero, the gallant and good, The crown of thy father is torn from thy brow."

A young lady, writing to her swain, is said to have indited:—" Dear——; Come and see us soon.
We have just got a new lamp that will turn down, and make it deliciously dark Your affectionate—."

A noted philosopher being asked by a friend how he kept himself from being involved in quarrels, replied, "By letting the angry person have it all to

How to FIND A POLICEMAN.-Look down every area in the street. If you do not by accident happen to see one, ring the bell and inquire if the policeman is in the kitchen. Repeat this at every door, and you cannot fail eventually to find one.

Some people (says an American paper) seems to be extremely sensitive. At one of the churches, on Sunday, the minister read the prayer for a person in deep affliction, and a man who had just been married got up and went out. He said that he didn't want public sympathy obtruded on him in that

A society is being organized for the purpose of stocking uninhabited islands with pigs and rabbits, so that shipwrecked sailors who happen to reach such spots may find an abundance of food waiting them. If the society wishes to enlarge its scope, pray let it add to these other blessings the acclimation on such islands of mothers in-law, water rats, flies, and chimney-pot hats, and other redundancies of civilization. The shipwrecked mariners may not be quite so comfortable, but look at the relief to us at home.

THE FATE OF "THIRDLY."-A clergyman in Forfarshire, who was conducting public worship in the open air, had a portion of his notes carried off by the wind. Not perceiving the circumstance, he announced that he would now proceed to the third head or division of his discourse, hastily turned ead of division of his discourse, hashiy times over his notes, remarking, two or three times "Thirdly my friends—I say thirdly;" on which an old woman sitting by cjaculated. "Thirdly, sir, is awa' wi' the wind; its ower the kirkyard wa'

Dr. Woodward, a Glasgow physician of the last century, had a patient who always had his fee in his hand to give to the doctor as he felt his pulse. One day, Woodward arrived only to hear that a few mindied "Impossible!" cried the doctor, " he cannot be dead yet. Let me see him; some trance or heavy sleep, perhaps." The doctor accordingly went to the bedside in a dark-ened apartment. He felt the pulse, and also a couple of guiness in the dead man's hand, which he took quietly into his own as honestly earned. "Ay, ay! Poor fellow," said the doctor, "he is dead. There's a destiny in all things." And with this tag of morality he went on his way.

Two little boys, one the son of a wealthy merchant, the other the son of only a poor editor, were walking up the street together. Said the merchant's son, "We live in a brown stone house, we've got a man to black our boots, we keep two horses and glorious carriages, and my mother never wears anything but silk dresses. What have you got? "Well," said the poor editor's son, "I don't know. We've got pen and ink, and a whole lot of exchanges. We ain't got much, but my father says your father is a dead-head." "What is a dead head?" asked the boy in fine clothes. "I' don't know," replied the unfortunate child of the literary man, "but I guess it's a body who don't never pay for his newspaper."
