

Foreword

The year 1987 marks the 10th anniversary of the signing of the Canada-Japan Free Trade Agreement. It is a time to reflect on the progress that has been made since the Agreement was signed and to look ahead to the future. The Agreement has opened up new opportunities for trade and investment between Canada and Japan. It has also helped to strengthen the economic ties between the two countries. In the years since the Agreement was signed, trade between Canada and Japan has grown significantly. This growth has been a result of the Agreement and the efforts of both countries to promote trade and investment. The Agreement has also helped to create new jobs in both countries. This is a testament to the strength of the Agreement and the commitment of both countries to free trade.

The Agreement has also helped to improve the lives of Canadians and Japanese. It has allowed Canadians to buy Japanese goods and services at lower prices. It has also allowed Japanese to buy Canadian goods and services at lower prices. This has helped to reduce the cost of living for both Canadians and Japanese. The Agreement has also helped to improve the quality of life in both countries. It has allowed Canadians to travel to Japan more easily and to experience the rich culture and history of the country. It has also allowed Japanese to travel to Canada more easily and to experience the natural beauty and culture of the country.

The Agreement has also helped to improve the relationship between Canada and Japan. It has allowed the two countries to work together on a wide range of issues, including trade, investment, and cultural exchange. This has helped to build a strong and lasting relationship between the two countries. The Agreement has also helped to improve the lives of Canadians and Japanese.
