

HAMILTON HAPPENINGS

WILL ANALYZE STOMACH

Jury Unable to Determine Cause of Allan Hay's Death.

HAMILTON, Feb. 20.—(Special).—The inquest into the death of Allan Hay, who came to his death in the police station on Friday morning, Feb. 17, was held last evening in No. 3 police station. Coroner Renner presided. After hearing the evidence submitted the jury were unable to come to a decision as to the cause of death. They recommend that the contents of Hay's stomach be analyzed, and also that the constable being stationed duty be empowered to call in medical attendance in any case without waiting for instructions from the sergeant. After bringing in this report the jury adjourned, to meet again at the call of the coroner if it was found necessary to hear any evidence as to the contents of the stomach.

The police commissioners this afternoon instructed Chief Smith that in future when selecting officers to do duty in plain clothes he was to select only those who were not "tipplers." Constable Barrett was allowed $100 expense money, while acting as plain clothes officer. The following eight constables were appointed to the force: H. Tompsett, Peter J. Carroll, R. J. Macaulay, James E. Smith, E. J. Macroy, Elliott McIntyre and A. J. Holland.

Within a short distance of where his clothes were found on the bay Sunday afternoon, the police station duty recovered the body of Christopher Andrews, who came here three weeks ago from Toronto. He had shown signs of mental weakness, pronounced delirium and it was thought that he had committed the crime. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon.

FAMOUS VIOLINISTS

A Few Who Have Visited Toronto, Including Mischa Elman.

Mischa Elman, fresh from the musical centres of the world, where he has met with a succession of ovations, will play at Massey Hall on Wednesday evening, March 1. Toronto has never recovered from the time to time visits from all the famous violinists of different periods, but it is doubtful if among them has been a more famous violinist than Mischa Elman. Wieniawski came in 1872. Like our next visitor, he was a Russian, and if there was ever a prodigious artist king it was he. Then came Remenyi, who made his violin both act and speak; then Wilhelm, the marvelous exponent of the classics; then Kreisler, called the successor of Joachim, and others of renown, including the last mentioned himself. And now Mischa Elman, the musical idol of the day all over Europe. It is difficult to imagine any violinist more completely in control of the resources of his instrument than Mischa Elman, or of one that uses these resources more appropriately and sincerely. The contemporaries of Paganini were astounded at his technical performances, till then unheard of, but amid and after the plaudits came the accusation "trickery." Elman, with all that Paganini did for the violin for his inheritance, gives us with the wizardly and witchery of the bow the breadth and dignity and simplicity of the super-violinist—the musician.

Tea Time Talks
Tea Spoils with Age

No tea is fit to drink after it is two years old. That is the age limit of tea quality and benefit. The best tea is the freshest. "Salada" Tea owes much of its world-wide reputation to its sale fresh from the plantation. The leaves are fresh picked every week the year round; then dried, sorted and packed in airtight then packed. Every five weeks a new picking of "Salada" comes fresh from plantation to purchaser.

AT THE THEATRES

At the Royal Alexandra

"The Prince of Pilsen." That "The Prince of Pilsen" has lost nothing of its popular attraction was abundantly shown by the large audience that last night welcomed its re-appearance at the Royal Alexandra. Nor were they disappointed, for the present production has not been excelled in brightness, vivacity and all-round excellence. This is all the more severe in the case of a musical comedy which, without novelty, depends on the quality of its interpretation.

At the Star

"Washington Society Girls." The show this week at the Star, "The Washington Society Girls," is certainly a good one. The show opens with a beach scene and gives the large company a chance to show their singing and dancing abilities. In Larry Smith they have a Dutch comedian away from the stage, who does an Irish part in a clever manner.

At the Gayety.

Sheridan's "Marathon Girls." Phil Sheridan's Marathon Girls are the attraction at the Gayety Theatre this week and should play to capacity houses at each performance.

At the Grand.

"The Lottery Man." Imagine the feelings of an old maid who finds herself in possession of a coupon which entitles her to fifty per cent. of a $300,000 fortune and a young and handsome husband to boot, and then being suddenly disillusioned. In the play "The Lottery Man" at the Grand this week, the above condition of affairs results from a lottery conducted by Jack Cartright.

At the Princess

"The Red Cross Princess." "The Red Cross Princess," presented to the public for the first time in Toronto, composed and produced entirely by local talent, scored a distinct success in the Princess Theatre last night. There were, to be sure, the customary little blunders and the signs of nervousness, but not to a pronounced degree, and it was quite apparent that unlimited time and attention had been devoted to this production. The audience is really the judge of a play's success, and the audience last night was anything but critical.

At Shea's

The Wonderful Genee. It is like a draught of the elixir of youth to watch the dancing of Genee, the wonderful little Danish dancer at Shea's this week. Her offering is a marvel of grace and beauty. Her first dance is "Roses and Butterflies." As she rises to view in a dainty butterfly garb from the centre of a great pink blossom, the petals of which are the faces of young women, very comely withal. From then on she flutters about the stage upon her agile toes and hovers here and there at will, playing with Miss. Alexis Kosloff, who, too, is an accomplished dancer.
