The Nursery

Babies and children of all ages may have malaria. It is most frequent in the spring and autumn, but may occur at any season. The usual course of the disease in older children is as follows: The child feels badly, may have a headache or vomit; then comes the chill, the child feels very cold, the teeth may chatter, and lips become blue. This will be followed by a burning fever, and after that the sweat comes. All these stages will appear at about the same time every day or every second or third day according to the kind of malaria. The regularity of the fever and other symptoms is the chief sign of the disease.

Young babies seldom have a chill or sweat; they show indigestion and irregular fever which may run very high. Sometimes there are convulsions. The appetite is poor and the tongue coated. Mothers make the mistake often of treating their children for teething or "worms" when the child should be examined by a physician. The treatment of malaria consists in making the child as comfortable as possible. Blankets and hot water during the chill; cool sponge-baths during the fever, and dry clothing after the sweats. The food should be mainly liquid or easily digested solids. Young babies should have the food lessened and weakened and be given plenty of cool boiled water. The special medicine for malaria is quinine. Generally calomel in small doses is given before the quinine; but a doctor must prescribe both doses. Mothers can do a great deal by proper food, baths, fresh air and proper clothing, but the giving of drugs should be left to the doctor.

World's Greatest Artists Soon Coming to Toronto

Gadski, Sembrich, Fremstad, Neilson and Other Renowned Vocalists, as Well as Arturo Tibaldi, Famous Violinist, Orville Harrold, Tenor, and Nahan Franke, Musical Director.

Tentative announcements have already been made of a great musical festival to signalize the opening of the autumn. This vast edifice was originally designed for the promotion of the lighter forms of sport, but it is to serve the cause of music as well. It has therefore been decided that it shall in its opening week, which begins on October 7, be the scene of the greatest assemblage of musical artists which has ever been gathered together in the history of Canada. The fact that the arena is under the management of Mr. Lawrence Solman, to those who have brought Teatruluz, the highest-priced singer in the world, and Anna Pavlova, the greatest of modern dancers, to this city. For weeks past, all agents in New York have been endeavoring to secure singers of world-wide celebrity for a gala week. There have been some disappointments owing to the fact that certain singers who were expected to arrive in America early in October have delayed their sailings from Europe, but nevertheless some of the greatest of living vocalists have been secured.

The festival will embrace a series of eight concerts, six evening performances and two matinees. At every one of these concerts an orchestra of fifty of the finest New York instrumentalists will play under the direction of the celebrated conductor, Nahan Franke. Mr. Franke last appeared in Toronto as concert master of the Metropolitan Opera, which was brought here in connection with the royal tour of the present King in October, 1901, is world-famous as a director of operatic music. Among the singers who will appear during the course of the week are the tenor, Orville Harrold, who in his appearance at the London Opera House, under the direction of Oscar Hammerstein, this year, was the sensation of the season at the empire's capital. In critical circles he is regarded as a much greater man than Caruso. The greatest living Wagnerian soprano, Johanna Gadski, needs no introduction to Torontonians; the peerless coloratura soprano, Marcelle Sembrich, whose voice still retains its unexampled flexibility and beauty, will also be heard; the young prima donna, Oliva Fremstad, a Swedish singer of American birth who is already renowned in every great operatic centre of the world, will make her first appearance in this city; and Torontonians will accord a great welcome to the exquisite lyric soprano, Alice Neilson. In addition the vocal ensembles will include several distinguished operatic artists or lesser fame. Nor is the instrumental side of the festival to be neglected, for among those engaged is the renowned violinist, Arturo Tibaldi, one of the most brilliant of living executants.

Owing to the vast seating capacity of the arena the management has been able to adopt the astonishingly low scale of fifty cents to $1.50, and next week a subscription list for season tickets at $8 and $12 respectively will be available to the public. Subscribers will have the first choice of the plan when it is opened, announcement of which will be made later. There will also be three hundred box seats available, for which a slightly higher fee will be charged.
