> Ye sons of Franklin! Welcome to the North! Toronto's brother craftsmen now give forth A thousand hearty welcomes to the men Behind the Press, which is Jehovah's pen, That writes upon the wall the tyrant's fate, And drafts the bill that "Labor is the State." We twine our flags to-day, we know no line, The International our lives combine; Our hands clasp yours, our bounding hearts respond To yours in Kinship's blood-red mystic bond.

When man rode forth on evolution's car, The night was black, and pale his natal star; But somewhere in his soul was hid the fire, Which lit a feeble lamp to lead him higher; At first he carved rude symbols on a bone, Or pictured prehistoric scenes on stone; Until immortal thought and human speech On lettered pages gave the power to teach Experience, reason, and the strength to soar Beyond our sphere, and knock at God's own door

We pass Assyria, Egypt, Greece and Rome, Where intellectual giants built a home; But all their labors only helped to fence The king's, the priest's and soldier's consequence; The common herd, the people, bore the brand Of deep-seared ignorance on brow and hand; But Guttenberg's great light dissolved hell's gloom That castes had spread on earth for labour's doom. Rejoice! Bold Typos! Nobly play your parts. Defend "The Art Preservative of Arts."

We lead the van in war for Liberty, And guard the precious boon Equality, So let us not forget Fraternity; For Universal Brotherhood we strive, And keep the grace of Charity alive. Another era dawns upon the world, The rings and money kings will soon be hurled From self-elected thrones—their mills shall cease
To grind up flesh and blood for chariot grease.
May capital and labor join and say:
"A fair day's labor for a fair day's pay;" So said the MAN whose Word our laws inspire "The laborer is worthy of his hire."
