With regard to the statement, that many of the strikers were going back to work, Bell Hardy declared that his advices from all along the line were to the effect that the men were suffering a few cases of defection, but the body was holding solidly together. He also denied emphatically the charge given as trike to so no of the lenders against the company and not of the men. He points out that the decision to strike was reached after a vote taken by the men from all sections of the system.

He added, 'In fact there was so brief a space between the issue of the arbitration commission's award and the strike that it would have been impossible for the leaders to have influenced the men, even had they tried to do so. Development of Traffic on Metropolitan Indicates Great Possibilities— A Hint to the Railroads.

The development of suburban traffic annot begin until the service is provided. Another condition is that there must be population before a service may be undertaken with some prospect of fair financial returns. If the skirts of a large city is rich agriculturally the existing population will inevitably be large and a suburban service must become a factor in the welfare of the people, a benefit to the censuming public in the city and will have the effect of stimulating real estate values within striking distance of the route on which the trains are
