Footsteps of Angels. BY LONGFELLOW. When the hours of day are numbered...

Then the forms of the departed. Enter at the open door. The beloved, the true-hearted...

Ho, the young and strong, who cherished. Noble longing for the strife. By the road-side fall and perish...

They, the holy ones and weakly. Who to the cross suffering bore. Faded their pale hands so meekly...

And with them the being beautiful. Who to the cross suffering bore. More than all things else to love me...

With a low and noiseless foot step. Comes the messenger divine. Takes the vacant chair beside me...

And she sits and gazes at me. With those deep and tender eyes. Like the stars, so still and bright...

Uttered not, yet comprehended. In the Spirit's voiceless prayer. Softly, in the darkness called...

O, though oft depressed and lonely. All my fears are laid aside. Such remember only...

Dr. Vaughan's first Guinea. The following interesting anecdote of the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, was related by himself...

"May I be allowed," said the Reverend gentleman, "to make a few observations...

"I remember too," said this circumstance cost me no little perplexity and anxiety...

"I passed along the streets, the fear of losing myself induced me frequently to take it at my pocket and look at it. First I put it in one pocket; then I took it out and put it in another; and while I took out of the second pocket and placed it in another—really perplexed what to do with it...

"At length my attention was arrested by a look-auction; I stepped in and looked about me. First one lot was put up; then another, and so it went on till I had seen a number of lots...

"I entered the table, just as the auctioneer was putting up the 'History of the World,' in two large folio volumes. I instantly thrust my hand into my pocket, and began turning over my guinea; considering all the while whether I had money enough to buy his lot. The bidding proceeded. At last I entered to bid too. 'Hello, my little man, aid the auctioneer, 'what, not content with as than the world?' This remark greatly confused me and drew the attention of the whole company towards me, who, seeing me anxious to possess the book, began bidding against me, and so the 'World' was knocked down to me at a very moderate price...

"How to get these huge books home was the next consideration. The auctioneer offered to send them, but I, not knowing what sort of creatures auctioneers were, determined upon taking them myself. So, after the assistant had tied them up, I marched out of the room with these large books upon my shoulder, like Samson with the gates of Gaza, amid the smiles of all present. When I reached home, after the servant had opened the door, the first person I met was my now sainted mother. 'My dear boy,' said she, 'what have you got there?—I thought you would not keep your guinea long.' Do not be angry, mother, said I, throwing the books down upon the table. 'I have bought the World for nine shillings.' This was on a Saturday, and I remember sitting up till it was well past midnight, turning over this 'History of the World.' These books became my delight, and were carefully read through and through. As I grew older, I at length became a Christian, and my love of books naturally led me to desire to become a Christian minister. To the possession of those books, I attribute, in a great measure, any honors in connexion with literature which have been added to my name. I have not mentioned this anecdote," said the Reverend gentleman, "to gratify any foolish feeling, but to encourage, in those young persons I see before me, that love of literature which has afforded me such unpeakable pleasures, which I would not have been without for all the riches of the Indies."

Prayer and Practice. 'Who was the man who made the last prayer?' said Miss M., who was on a visit to Brockford, and felt the same disposition to attend the prayer meeting there as at home. 'Mr. Hamilton,' said Mrs. Stewart. 'He must be a man of prayer. It is not often that one hears a prayer so appropriate and easy to unite with.'

Mr. Hamilton has a gift for prayer, especially in public. There was something in the tones of Mrs. Stewart's voice which indicated an unfavorable impression in regard to Mr. Hamilton. 'Has he not got a gift for private as well as public prayer?' 'I know little respecting his private habits, but there are some who do not enjoy his prayers as much as they do the prayers of some other men.'

'I should think they could easily pray with him, his petitions are so natural, so suited to our wants, and withal so fervently offered.'

'There are some who complain that his practice does not correspond with his prayers.'

'I hope there are none who do not think him to be a good man.'

'I believe he is generally thought to be at good man, but he is not a very consistent man. He is a very passionate man, and often in a few moments after a very earnest prayer in his family, that they may be meek, and gentle, and Christ-like, he has been known to fall into a violent passion with some of them. It is true that his passion is soon over, and that he is sorry for it; still the effect on the minds of many is very unhappy. Many think it would be better for him not to pray at all in public until he can make his practice correspond better with his prayers.'

Similarities in the Vegetable World. The fragrant white clover thrives, though trampled under foot; it furnishes the bees with stores of pure honey, without asking or receiving the credit of it. Meekness and disinterestedness.

The morning glory makes a fair show at sunrise, but withers as it becomes hot. Excitement without principle.

To cut off the top of the doek does no good; its roots must be eradicated. Sin is the same.

The thistle has a beautiful blossom, but it is so armed with spines that every body abhors it. Beauty and bad temper.

The elder bush produces a fragrant and delicate blossom, but the farmer abhors it, because it goes to a foot it will take a rod. Unprincipledness.

If the grass hoppers eat the silk of the cocoon, there will be no harvest. Irreligious principles in childhood.

If you go into a field of beggar-ticks in autumn, when you come home your clothes will reveal the fact. Vulgar companions.

Cranberries hide themselves beneath the moss; he who would find them must look for them. Modest worth.

Not an Enthusiast. The energy of the manner of the late Rowland Hill, and the power of his voice, are said to have been at times overwhelming. While once preaching at Wotton-under-Edge, his country residence, he was carried away by his feelings, and raising himself to his full height, exclaimed, "Beware, I am in earnest; men call me an enthusiast, but I am not; mine are the words of truth and soberness. When I first came into this part of the country, I was walking on tender hills; I saw a great fall in the river, and three human beings alive. I lifted up my voice for help, so loud, that I was heard to the town below, a distance of a mile. Help came, and rescued two of the poor sufferers. No one called me an enthusiast, then—and when I see eternal destruction ready to fall upon sinners, and about to entomb them irrevocably in an eternal mass of woe, and call on them to escape by repenting and fleeing to Christ, shall I be called an enthusiast? No, sinners, I am not an enthusiast in so doing."

A REMARKABLE COLORED MAN.—Samuel Williams, a colored man, has one of the finest farms in Washington county Md. The Hagerston Herald states that, at the age of 33 years he was a slave in Stafford county, Va., but subsequently purchased his freedom from his own earnings. He then bought himself and his wife and children which he accomplished when he was 50 years of age. Now he owns a farm worth $10,000, and personal property amounting to several thousand more, all earned by his own labour. He is now 75 years of age.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT

The Road to Health. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. CURE OF A DESCRIBED LIVER AND BILIOUS AFFECTION.

A PERSON 50 YEARS OF AGE CURED OF A BAD LIVER OF THIRTY YEARS' STANDING. Copy of a Letter from Mr. William Galpin, dated May 31st, 1851.

Dr. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. I suffered for a period of thirty years from a bad liver, and for a long time from a bilious affection. The worst symptoms were, a heavy head, a bitter taste in the mouth, a fullness in the stomach, and a general debility. I had tried every remedy that was recommended to me, but without success. At length I was induced to try your Pills, and after taking a few boxes I was cured. I can now say that I am perfectly well, and that I have no more of the same complaint. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, W. GALPIN.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, W. GALPIN.

Dr. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS. I suffered for a period of thirty years from a bad liver, and for a long time from a bilious affection. The worst symptoms were, a heavy head, a bitter taste in the mouth, a fullness in the stomach, and a general debility. I had tried every remedy that was recommended to me, but without success. At length I was induced to try your Pills, and after taking a few boxes I was cured. I can now say that I am perfectly well, and that I have no more of the same complaint. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, W. GALPIN.
