The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

I READ in a newspaper the other day of the establishment of a "school of domestic science" which was to have courses in dressing and millinery, in domestic science and in the nursing and care of children.

I set out at once to visit this school, and found it, after all, merely a wish it had been.

I wish there might be such a school publicly maintained in every city in the United States, and that a year or two at it might be considered as indispensable a part of the middle class girl's education as her high school course.

We say most emphatically that no man has a right to marry unless he can provide a suitable home for the girl.

Why has a girl any more right to marry when she is incapable of running the suitable home after she provides it?

Of course a girl might learn cooking and sewing, and all the other things that pertain to her profession of house-maker, right in her own home—and some girls do—but the majority of girls, left to learn the art of home-making in this casual way, apt to put as much study and concentration upon it as if they were studying it in a regular school?

Besides, unless the mother is an exceptional house-keeper, it is unlikely that she would know much about each branch of domestic science as the experts who would be hired to teach them.

Now I know there are a good many people who are going to say that the new fangled ideas that these experts will teach our girls are all nonsense and that the young girl will do much better to learn the art of housekeeping just as her mother and grandmother knew it.

Isn't that rather short sighted?

Aren't we altogether too willing to regard the science of housekeeping as something that can be left at a standstill while all the other sciences in the world progress?

My ideal school would have courses in simple economical cooking, making a specialty of the use of left-overs and the study of scientific food values, in plain sewing, mending and altering, in economical and intelligent buying not only of provisions but also of materials, and advanced courses for those who wished them in tailoring, embroidery and dressmaking.

There are, of course, in some large cities industrial schools where these things are taught, but not in many, and only a small proportion of the girls even in these cities attend the industrial high.

I believe that such a school should be established in every city and town in the United States and that a one year course in it should be made a requirement for a high school diploma for a girl, and graduate course should be open to those who had time for them.

Why would not the study of the need of such a school and the possibility of having it established in your community be a good thing for the woman's club to which you belong?

SMART SET MAY

SUFFER BY CHANGE

IN ENGLAND'S KING

London, May 11.—The change of sovereigns will bring a complete change in one of the chief aspects of London society.

Those persons who constituted what was known as "the King's set," and who, during the reign of Edward VII., played a part which many observers held to be altogether incommensurate with their position and value in the world, are not likely to find any favor in the eyes of George V., and particularly in the eyes of his queen.

Queen Mary is not popular with the smart set of London society. The smart set is an elastic term embracing not only those who are known as "the King's set," but a certain number of others, whom while not enjoying King Edward's personal favor, modeled themselves upon the King's set.

Queen Mary is likely to return their aversion with interest. The smart set has always expected to find her "troublesome" when she came to the throne. She will not permit of anything approaching freedom of tone or conduct in those with whom she associates, and has no taste at all for the vagaries of the less careful people who have been admitted to court circles.

In all respects a business woman, Queen Mary is likely to be of assistance to King George in arranging and keeping many social duties that belong to the throne, but she can be viciously personal. It has been said that she never did a wrong thing, nor did anything in a wrong way. Whether it is true or not she has an absolute appreciation of what is due to the position she has been called to occupy.

SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR
A Simple Treatment That Will Make It Truly Fascinating.

Chas. R. Wasson Guarantees it

Nowadays every up-to-date woman has radiant hair.

What a foolish creature a woman would be if she lost the opportunity to add to her attraction.

Yes in Canada today there are hundreds of thousands of women with bushy, faded, characterless hair who do not make any attempt to improve it.

In Paris most women have beautiful hair, and in Canada women who use Parisian Sage hair restorer and lustrous hair.

And any woman reader of the Times-Star can have attractive and lustrous hair in a few days' time by using this great hair rejuvenator, Parisian Sage.

Chas. R. Wasson sells a large bottle for 50 cents and he guarantees it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks money back.

Parisian Sage is an ideal hair tonic, not sticky or greasy. Chas. R. Wasson, 100 King Street and 24 Dock Street.

The members of the Canadian Club of the city think it fitting that during the memorial services and on the day of the funeral of the late king they should wear badges. These have been prepared by the ladies of the Women's Canadian Club and may be obtained free of charge by the members of both clubs at the book store of Gray & Ritchie, King Street, tomorrow and next week.

Ontario Crops

Toronto, May 12.—The Ontario department of agriculture has issued the following statement regarding agricultural conditions existing at the beginning of May.

Vegetation—May opened with a growth a week or two ahead of the average.

Spring sowing—Field operations have been the earliest for many years.

Fall wheat entered into May well forward.

Winter rye—The acreage of this crop is small but in good condition generally.

Clover—Wintered well, and presents a good appearance.

All classes of live stock are at a premium. Prices for horses are high and firm. Their general health has been good. Cattle are in better condition than last year.

There are fewer in number than usual, but in both dairy and beef raising sections more calves are being kept. Fat cattle are very scarce and a good deal of inferior or beef has been disposed of at good prices. Sheep are doing well. High prices for these also prevail. Some are not so plentiful.

Fruit trees have come through the winter in better condition. Blossoming well in bloom in the more southern communities, together with some apples and pears. The general outlook regarding orchard conditions is encouraging. Small fruits are well advanced, and promise an unusually early market.

MYSTERIOUS CLAIM AGAINST ESTATE OF MILLIONAIRE HOE

Bond Held by Woman Securing
Debt of $150,000 Provided
That Claim Should Lapse in Case
Holder Died Prior to Mr. Hoe's
Death

New York, May 12.—A mysterious claim for $150,000 has been brought against the estate of the late Robert Hoe, printing press manufacturer, by Margaret Johnson Johns Brown, of London, (Eng.).

An attempt was made before Surrogate Thomas by Mrs. Brown to establish her claim at once in order to enforce immediately the freedom of the city to the payment, but after hearing Attorney Edward G. Pringle for the executors of the Hoe estate, the court decided that no summary order for payment will be issued.

The proceedings took on an added interest when it became known that the claimant took a gambler's chance in getting the bond secured by the executors of the claim should hold against the estate on condition that Mrs. Brown outlive Mr. Hoe, but would lapse if he died before she died.

The attorneys interested refused to explain the feature of the case. Before the surrogate, however, it was stated in a half of the executors that a representative had been sent to England by them to investigate the claim and had reported that there was a series of transactions which had not been established.

An examination of the bond disclosed that it was made in July, 1898, under seal certain stocks and other valuable papers Mr. Hoe bound his estate before the executors, provided Mrs. Brown outlived the testator. The bond recites the fact that there was a series of transactions which involved turning over to Hoe other papers. No one cared to explain the nature of the papers.

Robert Hoe, head of the printing press family for three generations, died in London last September. His will provided that his estate, estimated to be worth over $8,000,000 be divided equally among his children.

RANCHER HOLDS UP
RAILWAY COMPANY

Spokane, Wash., May 12.—Douglas McAllister, a sturdy rancher in Okanogan county, in north central Washington, tied up constructive work on the Great Northern railway by driving its engineers and graders from his ranch and holding the fort single-handed until the federal court in Spokane stepped in. Judge Edward Whitson issued an order restraining him from interfering further with the company's operations.

The company picked a right of way through the McAllister tract for a line from Oroville south to Pateros recently when the rancher was awarded $775 for the land appropriated and $1,700 in damages to the remaining property. He protested saying that the jury's decision was unjust. However, he did not appeal from the verdict.

When the graders started work the rancher turned the water onto the line, flooding the proposed right of way, also threatening to kill the horses used by the men. His tactics were successful and operations were suspended until Judge Whitson issued an injunction that he be tried this month.

The fair took place at the home of the bride, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. B. Higgins. One of the guests was a most notable couple from the fellow employees of the groom in the L. C. R. brass and tool department.

THE NAVY'S PRESTIGE GOES UP
(Toronto World.)

The story in our news columns that the new king not long ago said that he and his sons would be with the fleet if a great naval struggle broke out, may or may not be true. But we believe it reflects the king's mind. He is a sailor, and a man-of-war sailor at that, knows his trade to the bottom, competent of command, an admirer of the navy, and a sailor.

In some things the change in ruler has been a loss, in regard to the navy, it is a distinct gain. We have a king whose very name, service and station in the navy will add fifty per cent. to the prestige of that navy in a great struggle.

The new king wears an admiral's uniform at his first council of state, and we imagine it will be his customary habit.

The Germans may have a soldier's concern; England has a sailor king who knows his trade.

TO BRING GUIDES AND SPORTSMEN TOGETHER

At a meeting of the St. John branch of the New Brunswick, Fish, Forest and Game Protective Association last night in the board of trade rooms a committee was appointed to arrange a joint meeting of the provincial guides and all those interested in the objects of the association. The committee is composed of the president, F. H. Flewelling and Secretary D. W. Cline, with E. A. Smith, B. S. Keith and Theo. Hillard.

John M. Robinson acted as chairman and among those who spoke on the work of the association were Theo. Hillard, D. W. Cline, W. F. Hatheway, M. P. D. and E. A. Smith. They outlined the objects of the association, which they stated were not to help men especially to hunt and fish, but to protect the forests and streams of the province from being drained of their resources.
