CREW DUMPS RUM INTO RIVER

Men on Gasoline Launch Seeing Eagle Boat with Militiamen, Think It "Dry Navy."

New York, June 1.—Seven cases of whiskey were dumped into the Hudson from the deck of a twenty-five-foot gasoline launch as the Eagle Boat 51, with sixty men of the First Battalion Naval Militia, approached the vicinity of the launch at the foot of West 130th street. When the man at the wheel of the power boat noticed the Eagle boat looming up near him he thought he was about to fall into the hands of the rum-chaser. He became excited and shouted a warning into the cabin of the boat. As the Eagle boat drew nearer two men rushed from the cabin of the smaller boat and began throwing bottles and cases marked "Whiskey" overboard, as the man at the wheel shouted: "We surrender, we surrender!"

"When the Eagle boat kept on its course the rum-runners in amazement began to berate one another for having acted hastily. Then, taking courage, they put on full speed and darted away. It was estimated that the seven cases of whiskey and a dozen or more bottles of other liquor thus lost by the rum-runners were worth about $1,000 at booting prices.

PREVENTION IS RIGHT POLICY

Notable Addresses Delivered at Ontario Health Conference This Week.

At the eighth annual meeting of the Ontario Health Officers' Association held in the Physics Building of the University of Toronto, this week, Dr. J. A. Morgan, M. O. H. of Smith Township, Peterborough, in speaking on "How to Control Diphtheria in a Small Country Village" stated that this disease causes one-third of all deaths due to infectious diseases. The trained nurse with the aid of cultures and anti-toxin, he emphasized, is the best means of attack, both financially and as to results.

In speaking of carriers of the disease, Dr. Morgan pointed out that convalescents were rid of germs in two, three or four weeks, but one in every 1,000 persons carry with them possible diphtheria germs. Milk is also a carrier. The removal of tonsils, adenoids, and foreign bodies in the throat were recommended. In pointing out the age in which disease is prevalent from three to six years were the most dangerous.

State Control.
In his presidential address, Dr. J. W. Shaw of Clinton stressed the fact that "State and preventive medicine represent the lalty, while sanitation and hygiene represent the profession. State control has come from the outside; it should have come from within. It should have come at the suggestion of ourselves. We are too self-centred. We should let the public know what we have accomplished. Institute a campaign of instruction so that all chief justices, judges and magistrates may be aware of the work in which we are engaged."

"I would not break down one lot of our ethical code," said the president, "but the profession should break away from the isolation in which it finds itself. The medical profession has been before, and Mrs. Pantola so notified the War Department. She received one in statement of government insurance, which was returned. Despite the correction of the records the monument to the soldier dead in Prospect Park bore Pantola's name. A small, unassuming monument in Fletcher Square also had his name inscribed among those who lost their lives. The third monument bearing his name was unveiled in Freedom Square, Brooklyn Parkway and Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, at ceremonies arranged by the Memorial Monument committee of the Nineteenth Assembly District.

The original error of reporting Pantola's death was the result of the destruction of an ambulance by a shell. Pantola, wounded, had been in the ambulance and his death was reported. When they have seen his name over a grave near Cambrai.

RESCUES SAME GIRL FROM THE SEA TWICE

Life Guard Who Saved Miss Merritt in Florida Repeats Feat at Brighton Beach.

New York, June 1.—The sort of thing that couldn't be expected to happen twice, that might, indeed, be called as infrequent as the impact of a second bolt of lightning at the same spot, happened for the second time at Brighton Beach this week. Circumstances which it might have been repeated at Brighton are not inconceivable, but to happen once at Miami and a second time at Brighton, with the very same girl—well, Captain Otto Ahrens, who is the hero of this story, is revising his tables of probability.

The girl was Miss Madge Merritt, 18 years old, of 2,068 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. A courageous girl and something of a swimmer, though not as much so as her sister Victoria. So when they ignored that wise adage against rocking the boat and tried to change seats in a canoe three-quarters of a mile off shore from the Brighton Baths, and both were pitched into the water, it was Victoria who went to the rescue.

A crowd along the beach watched them and thought at first they were just frolicking. But when the upset canoe drifted away and a slim white arm began flashing distress signals that became obviously feeble, Ahrens and his mate, Stanley Kinney, both lifeguards, set out.

Victoria's hold on her sister loosed just as the two brawny men came breasting the surf. Kinney grabbed Victoria. Ahrens' arms went around Madge just as the girl started bottomward.

"Well! Same girl I pulled out at Miami last winter. Seems like a habit!"

MORE CHILDREN POORLY FED.
Malnutrition Increases in Schools of Tenement Districts, Says Superintendent.

New York, June 1.—W. F. Johnson, superintendent of the school department of the Children's Aid Society, is authority for the statement that the number of children here suffering from malnutrition is on the increase. In spite of the best efforts of his organization in the eight schools and health centres maintained in the tenement districts.

Examination among these children reveals an alarming increase in the number of children who show signs of suffering from under-nourishment, insufficient or improper feeding, in other words.

"We are now furnishing," says Mr. Johnson, in Better Times, New York's welfare magazine, an average of 1,800 meals a day to children in our health centres, who are selected according to their degree of malnutrition. These children, in addition to this supplementary feeding, are given the best medical, dental and nursing supervision that we can procure. If, in spite of these efforts, they have lost ground this past year, I hesitate to think of what the percentage of malnutrition must be today among the great body of underprivileged youngsters of the city."

The schooner Ada A. McIntyre is remaining in Market slip, Peter McIntyre, owner of the vessel, said last night, until the final arrangements have been completed with the underwriters. He was unable as yet to give any estimate of the cost of repairing the schooner. He said that he expected that everything would be settled in time to tow the schooner to a drydock early next week.
