ARE SLOW TO ACQUIRE GUM HABIT

In England Heavily Backed American Effort Does Not Start Out With Rush of Success

(Times' Special Correspondence) London, Sept. 17-London's cables, it seems, take kindly to chewing gum, but the other inhabitants of this metropolis do not. According to a man who is trying hard to sell it, the only folk in these islands who care a hang for gum are the drivers of taxis, hansom and "four-wheeled."

This man was in the Strand yesterday—the first instance of chewing gum who has appeared there. He stood by the curb, with the newspaper and flower sellers and the vendors of penny toys, and he had quite a trayful of a well-known brand of American gum which he was crying lustily at a penny a packet. Two packets were purchased and the merchant was asked how he found business.

"Botten," he said. "This here chewing gum ain't no go in this country. I've been here ever since nine o'clock this morning (it was then one-thirty), and I haven't sold a shilling's worth yet. It don't appeal to English people. They buy it once and never again, except cabmen. They seem to take to it. I don't know why, but I always can find a customer on a cab-rank."

"Selling the gum in the streets is a new game, isn't it?" was asked. "Pretty new," replied the pessimist, "but they've had men trying it on the people in the theatre-square for several weeks now. They (referring to the purveyors) are advertising it on the drop curtains in the theatre, too, besides on the boardings and in the newspapers. But it won't go. They think it will but it won't."

"We try it in the country," he added, "and it goes, and with the air of a partner in the enterprise, but the sale's very quiet. I go to all the racematches, but I don't make nothing worth speakin' of. That's my bicycle over there," (indicating a "No-vintage safety leaning inside the gateway to Charing Cross, and carrying a sign in praise of the gum) "but I'm fed up with this game after six months of it."

Later in the day, the manager of a large confectionery shop in the suburbs which has big display ads of the same brand of chewing gum, was asked how it went, and gave much the same account as the man in the street. He said he had a few steady British customers but, thought, personally, it must be "nasty." Perhaps it would help some if the people interested hired "don-ostrotors," for it is reported that the Britons who sample the gum swallow instead of chew it.

Anyhow, it is early in the day yet to be as to be sure. "Yes, indeed, you'll never guess he's a millionaire," he backed by many thousands of British pounds as well as meeting him."

REPORT ABOUT THE ST. JOHN BREWERIES

For some time there have been rumors that the local breweries were to be absorbed by outside interests. Messrs. Jones of Simons Jones, Ltd., said this morning that offers had been made by a local broker but that nothing definite had been done and that they were not expecting to see any changes in the business at present. From another source it was learned that both the Labatt and the Carling brewing interests were trying to secure the Jones plant.

With regard to the James Reedy brewery in Fairville the story is to the effect that negotiations are in progress with the Dominion Brewers, Ltd., for the sale of the plant and business at a figure considerably over a half million dollars. At the office of the company the morning all knowledge of this was denied.

PROVINCIAL PERSONALS

Moncton Times—Maurice B. Megee, of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, has been transferred to the head office in Montreal. Miss Lottie Nixon, of Moncton, is on a trip to the west, and is at present the guest of her brother, Gerald Nixon, in the city of Edmonton.

Among former Moncton men doing well in Edmonton are C. B. Manning, secretary to the city commissioners; P. A. Edgington, C.E., son of John Edgington, city engineer of Moncton, on the engineering staff of Edmonton; Jack Rippey, son of William Rippey; Jack Duchmann, once with the L. C. R. freight claims agent's office, now travelling freight agent for the C. N. R., and some of his time in Edmonton; Jas. Tighe, formerly a clerk at the Brunswick, now in Edmonton travelling for a fruit firm, and Gerald Nixon in charge of a bookstore.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING

At the meeting of the city commissioners today a request for permission to lay a siding in Marsh street was received from J. A. Lively. Protests have been received from some of the residents that the siding was to be used in connection with a hide warehouse and they objected to the latter in the neighborhood. The matter was referred to the commissioner of public works.

The commissioners also discussed matters of finance, including funds for new fire hydrants which are required, and also for the improvement of the new playground at Rockwood Park. In the latter matter they are awaiting word from the Horticultural Society.

"What an insignificant-looking little man he is to be sure." "Yes, indeed, you'll never guess he's a millionaire," he backed by many thousands of British pounds as well as meeting him."
