UNITED STATES.

The late capture of the forts on the Hatteras latet has caused much euthusiasm in the North. From this success, the only one of much importance the federal arms, have obtained since the commencement of the war, a change of fortune is anticipated. Many are already clamorous for a complete change of programe. They say that the Northerners laving all the advantages of naval power need not wait till Beauregard chooses to lead his men from behind their intrenchments ; that by a series of well planned operations against the South wherever it is most defenceless, more effective blows can be dealt against the Confederates than by confining the war to one district. They cry "Let us carry the war into Africe ; let the policy of Scipio save the State." It is considered probable that such a course will be pursued. Already several other secret expeditions are planned.

This Hatieras victory does not appear to have been much of an undertaking. General Butler had a fleet currying 100 guns and 4,000 men, and Wereaded to appear to a state of the state of th succeeded in capturing two unfinished fortifica-tions, destitute of ammuni ion and incapable of sustaining any kind of a seige.
