

LIFE.

Eminent writers have said that "careful saving and judicious spending are the prime factors in the acquirement of most fortunes," and there is no better channel which enables a man to do this, than that of life insurance in a solid company such as the North American Life.

The Company has plans of insurance adapted to the needs of all classes.

Something of advantage to intending insurers furnished free, on application to the Head Office or any of the Company's agents.
