

stand and stand out in short puffs at the top and below the puffs they fit closely. The high bolero collar is made with a center seam style and its upper edge is shaped like a three points; it is sewed to the neck edge of the jacket and for a short distance under the folds of the lapels and wide-lares becomingly. Grecian and trimming outlines the collar both inside and outside and also decorates the wrist edges and all the remaining free edges of the jacket, the trimming being arranged in scroll fashion at the fancy curves in the fronts, and at the end of the center seam. The jacket may be made without sleeves.

Velvet and either plain or any silk are used for these jackets and so are all fine qualities of suitable weight. The edge trimming is usually lace, jetted or embroidered bands, although very narrow haltings of silk set on under jet ending are also used.

We have pattern No. 8947 in seven sizes for ladies from thirty to forty-two inches, bust measure. For a lady of medium size, the jacket with sleeves needs four yards of goods twenty-two inches wide, three yards and three-fourths thirty inches wide, or two yards and three-fourths thirty-five inches wide, or two yards and three-fourths thirty-eight inches wide, or a yard and five-eighths forty inches wide. The jacket with sleeves requires a yard and three-fourths twenty-two inches wide, or a yard and a half thirty inches wide, or a yard and a fourth thirty-six inches wide, or seven-eighths of a yard forty-four inches wide, or three-fourths of a yard fifty-four inches wide. Price of pattern, 1s. or 25 cents.

FIGURE No. 152 W.—This illustrates a Ladies' basque. The pattern, which is No. 8959 and costs 1s. or 25 cents, is in twelve sizes for ladies from thirty to forty-six inches, bust measure, and is also shown on page 299 of this magazine.

The military style of the basque is accentuated by the trimming of soutache and wide Hercules black braid, which is very effective on the green whipcord of which the basque is here made. The basque extends a stylish depth below the waist and has coat laps and plaits at the back and a pretty flare below the closing, which is invisibly made at the center of the front. A decoration of braid in accord with that on the fronts is on the one-seam sleeves, which stand out at the top in the fashionable puff. If preferred, the sleeves may have shallow turn-up cuffs. The collar may have a turn-down portion, but preference was here given to a standing military collar ornamented with braid.

Braid decorations are a part of military basques, which are made of chevrot, broadcloth, etc. Many arrangements of various braids are seen. The velvet toque is trimmed with fancy plumage and flowers.
