force, violence and terror, and other ruthless iniquities, is able to crush the peoples of Europe, what is going to become of the doctrine of isolationism of this North American continent? If Britain goes down, if France goes down, the whole business of isolation will prove to have been a mere myth. There will in time be no freedom on this continent; there will in time be no liberty. Life will not be worth living. It is for all of us on this continent, by helping others, to do our utmost to save its privileged position.' May I again remind you that was said on September 8, 1939 - more than two years before the United States came into the war!

When Germany attacked Russia on June 22, 1941, I stated that Germany's declaration of war upon Russia had removed the last shadow of doubt - if any yet remained - concerning the purpose of Hitler to dominate the world.

Speaking in Winnipeg on July 10, 1941, still almost five months before the entry of the United States into the war, I said: "Today the world is in the midst of battles of continents and of oceans: the battle of Asia, the battle of Africa, the battle of the Atlantic. Tomorrow may witness the battle of the Pacific ... In whatever direction we look out from this Western Hemisphere, we see a world ravaged by the fires, torn by the destruction, and
