

such noble and efficient service in her early days. The names of James Leask, Geo. Leask, Alexander Mustard, Alexander Ross, John Imrie, William Oxtoby and many more might be mentioned. Of these only one member now remains—George Leask, the last of the faithful band who guided the church in her infancy.

And now, looking back over the past, we realize that on the whole our congregation has made encouraging progress. But encouraging as the past has been we believe the best is yet to be, knowing that

The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight;
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward through the night.
