CARLETON'S Condtion Powders for

Horses and Cattle.

The changes of weather and season, with the change of use and feed, have a very great effect upon the blood and sinuous fluids of horses. It is at these times they require an assistant to nature to throw off any disorder of the fluids of the body that may have been imbibed, and which, if not attended to, will result in the Tellow Water, Heaves, Worms, Bots, &c. All of which will be prevented by giving one of these powders, and will cure when disease appears, if used in time. They purify the blood, remove all inflamation and fever, loosen the skin, cleanse the water, and invigorate the whole body, enabling them to do more work with the same feed. The action of these powders is direct upon all the secretive glands, and therefore has the same effect upon the House, Ox, and all and all Herbiverous animals—all diseases arising from or producing a bad state of the blood, are reseably correctly them.

Star Life Insurance Company.

NOVA SCOTIANS and other RESIDENTS of this Province, who contemplate Insuring their Lines for the benefit of those depending on them, or Lives of others in debted to them, are requestry to take Notice, that the next division of profits in the above Institution will be made at their Office 44, Moorgate Street, London, at the close of the year 1853. It will therefore be greatly to the advantage of those who intend to Insure In it, to do so previous to 30th November in the present Year 1851, in order that they may come in at said division for their share of profits for the three years, otherwise they will have to wait until 1858 for similar participation,—and it is expected at said Division the profits will be equal to, if not greater than those in 16-18, when there was Sixty Two per cent, on the premium paid in three years added, as a bonus to the Policies—the Largest Bonus ever given by any Company having Agencies here. All persons will do well to consider that Life and Health are both uncertain; consequently delays are dangerous?

The Governor and the Mother.

In the Lights of Temperance, is an article from the pen of Rev. A. B. Longstreet, L. L. D., President of Oxford College, Miss., entitled " A Voice of Warning," from which we make the following extract:

I witnessed once a scene which comes appropriately in place here. During the commencement exercises of Emory College, upon one oc-casion the Governor of the State of Georgia, and his lady, with a goodly number of other friends, were staying with me. All were light-hearted, cheerful, and happy, when a female form, plainly but neatly attired, entered my gate, and advanced to my door. I received her, and, upon her request to see the Governor, I conducted her to his

"Governor," said she, "I am the mother of the man who is to be executed, four days' hence, at Columbus for murder. Hearing of his sentence in Maryland, where I live, I hastened with all speed to Milledgeville, to beg of you a respite of his sentence, till the meeting of the Legislature. There my money gave out; but not find-ing you there, I have followed you hither, having walked most of the way (sixty-five miles) to make the request. Governor will you not suspend the sentence?" "Madam," said the Governor, his eyes already filled with tears, for no Governor ever had a kinder heart, "if I were to grant the respite, you could not possibly reach him with it, in your enfeebled and exhausted situation, in time to save him." "Yes I will, Governor; give it to me, and I will have it in Columbus before the hour of execution arrives.

"Then you would have to travel night and day, for four nights, and three days and a half." "Only give me the respite, and it shall reach him in time. I shall see him, any how, before he dies; but I have no time to lose.

"Madam," said the Governor, "I most deeply ympathize with you, and it pains me to tell you that I should violate my official duty to grant the respite. I have examined the case, and I cannot find a single mitigating circumstance in it, in your son's favor.'

"O, Governor! my son is not a murderer at heart. His disposition is peaceable. He was not himself when he committed the deed. O. Governor! here on my knees before you, I pray you have pity upon a poor heart-broken widowed

Our wives sobbed aloud, and the Governor and myself mingled our tears profusely over the bending suppliant. There was but one of the group that could speak, and that one bore the ourden of us all, multiplied a thousand fold.-The Governor raised her from her knees, and repeated, by a shake of the head, what he had already said.

And now went forth from that poor woman's neart—what shall I call it? A sigh? It was not that. A sob? It was not that. A groan? It was not that; but an indescribable out breathing of all that is eloquent in grief, and melting in sorrow. Her accents had caught the ears of the group in the adjoining porch, and produced a death-like silence there: and my habitation, so lately the scene of mirth, was like the court of death.

At length she broke silence :-

"If there is no hope, I must hasten to my child before he dies.'

She rose, and tremblingly advanced to the porch, followed by the sympathizing friend, but unyielding Chief Magistrate. She passed the crowd without seeming to notice them; and, as her foot fell upon the step that was to conduct her away from the habitation of hope, she cast back a melting look, and commenced her last appeal, with "O! Governor! for God's sake"when she sunk to the floor. At length, rising, as if moved by the thought that she was losing the time which alone would enable her to see her son alive, she refired.

The Governor disappeared with her, his carriage soon followed, and though no questions were a ked on his return, I doubt not, that he offered her the best solace that he could, in her extremity, without a breach of duty.

Now I ask, what is all the good that ardent spirits have ever done, compared with the pangs which this one poor widow has suffered? But her's was no uncommon case. Multiply her afflictions by ten thousand, and you will get the exponent of what one class, and that about the t onr race, have suffered from the use of inebriating drinks. Ah! God bless you, men, I fear we shall have a dread account to render at the court of Heaven, for our dealings with this class of the human family.'

The Act of the New Brunswick Assembly passed last Winter, for the destruction of all intoxicating liquors seized for breach of the Revenue Laws, has received the Royal assent, and is now a law of that Province.

It provides "That all Wines, and Spirituous Liquors, forfeited for a breach of the Revenue laws, shall, with the casks, &c. in which the same were contained, be destroyed by direction and under the immediate supervision of the Treasurer or his Deputy, and the officer seizing the same be entitled to receive from the Treasurer out of the Provincial Revenue, a sum of money equal in amount to the duties payable upon a like quantity legally imported."

A superior lecture was read in the Athenæum Room on Monday evening last, by Math. H. Richey, Esq., on the development and destination of the English language. An animated discussion followed, in which the lecturer acquitted himself admirably.-Ath.
