As a spectacle it is worth seeing; men and horses alike decked with barbaric splendor in colors that are as well chosen as they are brilliant, and even the saddle coverings and horse furniture are arranged so that their shades of color shall match or form a pleasant contrast with the color of the horse on which they will be displayed. As a game or an exhibition of skill it is failure.

Tent pegging without tent pegs, racing without prize or prestige for the winner, a march past without any one caring a button whether line or distance is kept-any of these would be as satisfying as this powder play. Yet Moors are enthusiastic about this "lal borad" and think that the existence of it is proof of vigorous national life and a sufficient warning to foreigners of the danger of interfering with a people so efficient and warlike. Some time ago at a Moorish picnic I saw what in another country would have been a shooting match.
