THE HERALD SAID SO.

Editor Times,—To settle a dispute, please say if the Herald at one time said editorially that the Council should not sign the Hydro-Electric contract?—Ratepayer.

It did. It said "the form of contract is not what it ought to be," and speaking of the monopoly provision, it said: "We do not think it would be prudent for this city voluntarily to cut itself off from another source of supply."—Ed.

LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

Sir,—How old is Lord Charles Beres-food, and why is he spoken of as "'Con-dor Charlie"? —A Canadian Boy.

Lord Charles Beresford was born Lord Charles Beresford was born on Feb. 10, 1846, and is therefore in his 64th year. He is familiarly referred to as "Condor Charlie" because he com-manded the "Condor" with great gal-lantry at the bombardment of Alexan-drie in 1892 and subsequently institut dria, in 1882, and subsequently instituted police system in the city.—Ed.

MORE STREET RAILWAY.

MORE STREET RAILWAY.

Dear Editor,—While we who live some distance from the car lines are pleased to see that the roadbed of the street railway is being rebuilt in such a splendid way, we think we should have more lines built. Cannot some arrangement be made to get extensions made? It would boom building and be a blessing to the workingmen of the city.—One Who Walks.

THE TAXES GO UP.

THE TAXES GO UP.
Editor Tomes—What are things going to come to in Hamilton if the riot of money spending keeps on? Our taxes continue to go up. When the last jump was made, we were led to expect that it would be only for a year. Now we learn that School Board extravagance may cause them to go still higher. The Board has been boosting salaries wherever asked, and plunging into all sorts of expense. Then the Council is going to wast thousands of dollars yearly in buying Hydro-Electric power at far higher prices than we get power for at higher prices than we get power for at our door. It is time that the taxpayer put his strong hand on the aldermen who are piling burdens on him and showed them the door for good and all

IMMORAL POST CARDS.

To the Editor of the Times:
Sir,—Regarding the indecent postcards and photographs, which has been so boldly circulated throughout Canso boldly circulated throughout ada and the United States, in the past few years. We notice of late there has been many engaged in the business who have been arrested and surely punished, but apparently this does not seem to stop the circulation of them. The reason of this might be placed to the large profit that is made from their sales. The vendors are willing to take great chances in selling them. A comparison might be made to that of the Sunday vaudeville and picture shows in Montreal, where it is unlawful for them to do business on Sunday, but the large profits that are made enables them to do business on Sunday, but the large profits that are made enables them to pay the fine and they continue to do business which can but show a great defect in the law. There has been a great deal done in the past year or so to try and suppress the sale of the immoral post-cards and other forms of immoral literature, and the display of them in the stores has been much lessened, but still it is not what it should be. The vendors do not seem to know where to draw the line at decency in regard to the sale of them. As you still can see cards displayed openly in picture and many engaged in the business who have been arrested and surely punished, sale of them. As you still can see cards displayed openly in picture and other stores in most all cities and towns other stores in most all cities and towns throughout Canada and the United States on most suggestive and vulgar lines, these they claim to be amusing, but instead, they are simply depicting rudeness among girls and men, this class of card is easily obtained. It is not only through the many stores, but there has been even slot machine placed over our country, for their distribution. Then you see advertisements in American papers soliciting people to write for packages of the high art post cards, giving box number at Chicago or some other American city. The cards that are received are mostly on lines of something obseene and vulgar. This class of suggestive and obseene literature is doing more harm than the more obscene cards and photographs that are sold secretly to men, owing to their being so easily obtained by young people and are sent through the post.

With all the many debasing features that has come upon us of late, such as bad books and other publications, I do not think there is any one which has done so much to poison the minds of the throughout Canada and the bad books and other publications, I do not think there is any one which has done so much to poison the minds of the youths as the obscene post-card craze. In England they are taking stringent steps to rid the country of these cards and other forms of demoralizing literature by imposing heavy fines and also imprisonment.

imprisonment.

There are also numbers of obscene pictures which are published under the disguise of fine art. The reason of so much of this indecent literature creeping in is on account of not enough protest being brought against it at the right time. Therefore, the people have become gradually accustomed to it, and it has gone from bad to worse. The only way to drive out the immoral cards and other things on these lines is to have stringent laws made that will punish people who are found carrying them, as well as those who have them, for sale.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 28th, 1909.

In England they are taking stringent means to wipe them out. The following is a clipping from the Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, which will show the heavy fines being imposed. "Offensive post-cards—Vendor smartly fined.—"At Douglas, on Saturday, Isreal Rothfard, who last year committed on bail, charged with selling offensive post-cards—and who then absconded, surrendered to take his trial on the charge. Defendant was the Novelty Postcard Company, of Liverpool, with branches at Douglas. He had been previously convicted, and was fined £30, There are also numbers of obscene

On his recent return journey from Britain His Excellency found time to read "The Life of James Robertson D. D.," by Charles W. Gordon (Ralph D. D.," by Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), and was profoundly impressed by the magnitude of the man and of the service he rendered to the whole Dominion by his work in Western Canada. Meeting the author in Winnipeg during his recent visit to that city, His Excellency said: "I have just finished 'The Life of James Robertson.' I read the book from cover to cover. He strikes me as having been a very great man. I should like, as a tribute of my respect, to visit his grave," There remained but a day of his stay in Winnipeg, but he found time to arrange a visit to the old historic Kildonan churchyard, where repose the ashes of so many of those great Canadians, Black, Nesbit,

The scene was one profoundly impressive. Accompanied by Dr. Gordon and Rev. Hugh Hamilton, minister of Kildonan, His Excellency approached the grave, removed his hat, and while all grave, removed his hat, and stood with bared heads, read aloud the inscription

"Rev. James Robertson, D. D., "Pastor of Norwich, 1869—1874.

To his memory and to the glory of God this stone is erected by a few of those who loved him and counted it a joy to labor with him in his great work."

"That strikes me," he said, "as a migularly beautiful and a simple leaf.

"That strikes me," he said, "as a singularly beautiful and a singularly appropriate inscription." Then taking from his aide a wreath of ferns and roses, he laid it upon the grave, saying: "This wreath I deposit here as my tribute of respect to a great man, the man who saved Western Canada from becoming the wild west." He stood a few moments over the grave and then there oments over the grave and then turn ed away in silence

Character Sketch of Geo. Frederick Jelfs, Police Magistrate

nor even seen the presiding genius of that musty sanctum, who has sat in the revolving chair since May 18, 1893. The man who has occupied that chair is George Frederick Jelfs, born July 12, 1853, in Sherborne, Dorsetshire, England. He came to this city from that village on July 12, 1871, in company with Lindley Wilton, who also came from Sherborne, and is a prosperous man to-day. There are also hundreds and hundreds who have met the man casually, but there are few who really know Magistrate Jelfs outside of his official capacity. For the benefit of such the few following impressions by one who has known him intimately for some time and is daily thrown in contact with him may prove interesting.

It is unnecessary to give an account of his early struggle, for that has been done repeatedly. But of the man himself, what he is to those who really know him. To-day he is a fine-looking gentleman, clean shaven, and with iron grey hair—always closely cut.

-always closely cut. is about five feet eight inches tall He is about two feet eight inches tall and weighs apparently about 160 pounds. He is not as old as his years, for he is as nimble as the proverbial cricket yet, and has a laugh that is like scarlet fever, very contagious. It is the laugh of a boy with good red blood in his veins. His face—well, don't think it has any of the characteristics of steel in it; no, it exhibits the true character of the man, his eyes sparkle as hrightly as they age. cannote the true character of the man, his eyes sparkle as brightly as they ever did, and show the soul of the man. In disposition he is lovable, he has a way that makes you respect him; he is without an atom of pride. If those who have received kindness from him were to be he never fails. Watch him go down King William street every morning to Police Court. The children don't run away, and they are the best judges of men after all, and meny a kiddie knows the sunshine of his smile and the cheerishness of his kind words.

Duaring all his sixteen years on the Magistevial beach not one single imputation of wrong-doing morally or officially, has been or ever could be rightfully laid at his door. He has been faithful to his trust and has done his duty always, irrespective of all else.

But then a man said to the writer yesterday, "He is so erratic." Maybo he is from our viswpoint, but if the critics were put in his position, had his daily trials, their erraticism would be experienced by many unfortunates. Magistrate Jelfs has never allowed money to influence his court. The rich man gets no more favor than the poor there. He is impartial, but if there are any favors granted the poor man or woman gets them.

Never does a young man appeal in vain to him for a chance.

Many times he has helped those brought before him. If anyone comes before him on a serious charge and he or she is too poor to afford a lawyer, he always watches the case on their behalf. The volume of other people's troubles he is asked to straighten out every day would drive many to distraction. His office is besieged by scores during the time he is there; he is stopped on the street, and when he goes home to his wife and children, even there he is always the same kind gentleman, ready to advise and help all in need, never complaining, loyal to his trust. The writer has never heard so much as any ungentlemanly remark made by him.

He is one of the "white men," a good example to the young man; a credit to the city—to himself.

I was capable of looking after my own love affairs, and I seriously objected to any woman trying to step in between us and dictate the course my sweetheart should pursue in her courting days. I love my sweetheart with all my heart, and I saw no reason why the Hazell girl should try to poison my girl's mind against me. Miss Hazell knew exactly my feelings towards her; in fact, I told her on more than one occasion that she would have to leave my girl alone.

casion that she would have to leave my girl alone.
