

A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER VII.

A Great Day at Police Headquarters. (Continued)

"I do not think it good reasoning; but no matter about that. It is a question easily solved. All you have got to do is accompany me to a neighboring station. One glance at her face—"

"I had rather not do it. I have had enough of such excitement lately. Yet I would never forgive myself if it were really she, and I shirked the responsibility of the recognition. Let us go, Byrd, let us go."

The detective expressed himself as ready, and they started. One glimpse, and Degraw became a new man. It was not she.

"Singular," muttered Byrd, "that they should both be named Jenny."

But, on their return, he was tempted to mutter something more emphatic, for just as they stepped into the building, they heard a voice, speaking out in loud and shrill tones.

"A girl missing from your school? And what is her name please?"

"It is Jenny—Jenny Rogers."

"Ah! And how does she look? What is her complexion and the color of her hair?"

"Fair, sir; very fair. Her eyes are blue, and her hair a bright yellow."

At this unexpected response, Byrd, who had been turning to speak to Degraw, stared, and exclaimed, in his astonishment:

"Fair? The woman cannot know what she is talking about. And, pushing forward, he dragged Degraw to the place where this colloquy was taking place.

"She is an orphan," the good woman was now saying, "or I should not feel so badly about her disappearance; and she is so pretty, too, and so—"

"But fair?" Byrd here put in, with a deprecating glance at the inspector to whom the other was speaking.

"Oh, yes, sir, white as a lily. There was not a bluer-eyed girl in the school."

"And her name?"

"Is Jenny Rogers."

Byrd was silent and presently drew back.

"The dead girl is no blonde!" he cried. "Her Jenny Rogers is not our Jenny Rogers; yet how curious! Two Jenny Rogerses on our books to-day and—"

Here he was tapped on the shoulder by an elderly man whose countenance at once attracted the artist by its keenness and good nature.

"You're wanted," was his word to the young detective. "Something odd has turned up."

Byrd nodded and glanced at his companion.

"May I bring this gentleman? He is secrecy itself."

The other, who did not seem to think it necessary to look at the person thus commended, smiled in an indulgent sort of way, and remarked:

"If he knows of any one by the name of Jenny Rogers, he will be only too welcome. But I hardly think—"

"I know a Jenny," interposed Degraw, with a hasty look at Byrd. "And though her name may or may not be Rogers, she has left her lodgings under circumstances so mysterious that I have come here for the express purpose of gaining information in regard to her."

"Humph! and her last name is not Rogers!"

The Stomach Needs Help

The liver, kidneys and bowels must be kept active with DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

The liver and kidneys are overworked in their efforts to remove the poisonous waste matter from the system. They fail and become torpid and clogged. The bowels become constipated and stomach derangements follow.

There is one medicine which will overcome this condition more certainly and more quickly than any other, and this is Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This medicine gets the bowels in action at once and by awakening the liver and kidneys ensures the thorough cleansing of the filtering and excretory systems.

With the poisonous obstructions removed, the digestive system resumes its healthful condition, appetite improves, pains and aches disappear as well as irritability and depression.

You cannot imagine a more satisfactory treatment. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Ed. Hanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Jennie Rogers Mystery.

Late on this same day, the inspector sat at his desk, studying the various reports of his subordinates.

Those relating to the Jenny Rogers inquiry lay in one pile and those relating to other matters in another.

With the former alone he was interested. Without attempting to reproduce them literally, I will transcribe for you their substance, as I take it for granted that you take enough interest in this affair to wish what discoveries had been made in relation to it.

First, there are nearly three hundred families of the name of "Rogers" mentioned in the New York directory.

Of these, forty have been found to contain a "Jenny," ten of whom are infants, and five of advanced years.

Ten more are married, leaving only fifteen of the age and condition necessary to include them in the category of young girls. One of these died yesterday, the daughter of Abram Rogers, living in Fifth street.

Her illness was scarlet fever, and her death was a legitimate one. There is, however, one fact connected with this that we have thought it well enough to record. Some three weeks before any signs of disease had developed in this girl, she came to her mother and told her that she was haunted by a strange man. We should have said shadowed, for when her mother forced her to explain, she told how a certain man whom she did not know, but who had every appearance of being a gentleman of means and culture, was continually being met by her in the street, at church and on the school steps.

How he had looked at her, not disrespectfully but too intently for her to doubt that his interest was the result of some strong motive, and though he never addressed her, he always had the appearance of being on the verge of doing so. She was not afraid of him but she would rather not walk out alone, and after his confession, her parents took good measures that she should not be called upon to do so. Two weeks later, she was taken ill, and on the morning of her death, which was yesterday, a strange gentleman called at the house and asked for her. He was told the sad news and seemed much shocked, but turned immediately away. A relative who caught a glimpse of him at the door declares him to be the same person who had so diligently haunted the young girl's steps.

Miss Hadden's school having been visited, certain facts have come to light in reference to the young girl who was reported this morning as missing. She is the last representative of an old Detroit family. Her fortune is considerable and she has for a guardian a highly respectable gentleman of Detroit. She is pretty and generous, but headstrong. To her schoolmates, she is all openness and affection, but to her teachers, reserved, if not sly and willful. She too, has been haunted by an unknown gentleman, who was so affected by what she chose to consider his honorable attentions, that she seemed to lose her judgment, and fancy he was a lover whose passion it was her duty to return. Influenced by these impressions, her manner had grown languishing, and she had been found more than once scribbling notes and verses to the handsome unknown. Her disappearance, which was not accompanied by tokens of premeditation is laid by her schoolmates to the arts of this secret suitor, and they expect to hear very soon of a private marriage between this foolish girl and the gentleman above mentioned.

So much for current gossip. More private inquiries elicited further and less well-known facts. A teacher, who had watched the girl narrowly, says that she does not look for any such termination of the affair; that the gentleman, who was one of the many visitors on a certain exhibition day, had seemed more interested in her name than in herself, for he had asked if there was any girl in the school by the name of Jenny Rogers; and when told yes, had looked with deep interest at the person designated. But it was not with a lover's interest, or so the demure teacher persisted in declaring. But, whether this be true or not, a large reward has been offered to the man who shall first discover her present whereabouts.
