Ontario Legislature.

Tonosto, Jan. 22. The debate raised by the explanations made by the Commissioner of Crown Lands was resumed by Mr. Cumberland, who declared he was free from party transmels, and would judge every measure on its merits, not on party principles. Mr. Sexton, in a very able speech, de-clared that the Government was not a coalition, and that it should receive the hearty support he had given to its leader in Opposition. He expressed too, his hearty approval of the arrangements of the Cabinet, by which all classes and sec-tions were ensured a voice in the national count.

tions were ensured a voice in the national council. Mr. McCallum promised to give the Government a fair support, and to judge it by its measures. Mr. Lander denonneed the President of the Executive Council, and for pressing, a vote against the late Government when eight constituences were unrepresented. During the last four years he had given offence not only to the President of the Council bat to that, gentleman's master outside of the House. Mr. Sinclair read Mr. Lauder a severo lecture on his political inconsistency. Mr. Boulthee defined his position as a supporter of the new Administration. Mr. Perry gave his full concurrence in the Government's composition and policy.

the Government's composition and policy. 'Mr. Ardagh disapproved of some of the proceedings of the Patent Combination, but would have given them a general support if in power. He would never-theless judge the new Administration by their measures and would give them the same assistance he would otherwise have necerded to their predecessors. Mr. Ferguson had a fling all round, and it was hard to say from his utterances on what side he will be found on a division. Mr. Prince defended Mr. Scott in an able manner. Mr. H. S. Dr. Bointer, while dissibilities with the manner in which the late Governing was turned out, would act fairly by the new one. Mr. McCunig took a historical review of the relations of parties, disapproved of the electron to Mr. Sandfield Macdonald from office, but approved Mr. Blake's proposal to give the Legislature control of the public moneys appropriated to railways; and would give a fair support to the Ministry. Mr. Corby followed with similar assurances, as also did Mr. Grange, Mr. Gness and Mr. Galbraith. Mr. Stephen Richards attacked the Government, and especially Mr. Scott, but on being pressed he was obliged to admit suspicion was the only ground for the gross accusations he had made, both in and without the Honse, against the Crown Lands Commissioner. Mr Blake replied at length to the opponents of the Government, which were shown by the conclinatory bearing of the Conservatives towards Mr Scott, whiles at the same time the other members of the Government were denounced as faithless to their principles, in consequence, as was alleged, of their having formed a coalition in character similar to the Ministry which had preceded them. He showed the absurdity of the charge, and entered into a bold and conclusive defence of the conservative definee of the distribute definee of the more similar to the Ministry which had preceded during the debate from the opportie side, reminded the Honse that Mr Scott had declared that what the Ministrial programme of piolicy made him that hewar: and he (Mr Blake) de-that Mg Scott had declared that what tho Ministerial programme of policy made him that he was : and he (Mr Blake) de-manded to know whether that programmo was not an emb odiment of Reform princi-ples? He was sustained in effice by Re-formers, and would hold it no longer than their support was cordially given.
