Induced by the use of opium, opiate or narcotic compounds is bad, decidedly bad. They undermine health and shatter the constitution and the patient is steadily growing into a worse condition—often resulting in the terrible slavery and misery of the cocaine and opium habit. Sleep induced by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla does not perhaps come so quickly, but it comes more surely and more permanently through nature's great restoring and rejuvenating channel—purified, vitalized and enriched blood. This feeds the nerves with life-giving energy and builds up the system and constitution from the very foundation of all health and life—the blood—pure, rich, red blood.

The London West Council's Action on Those Writs.

The Solicitor's Communication Put on the Hook—Renewing a $1,000 Note.

Last night's meeting of London West Council was a quiet one. The serving of the writs seemed to take the vim out of the members. Just before the meeting Reeve Saunby stood at the corner of Ann street, and felt disappointed because he had not received his writ, when he knew the others had. At 8:35, when he entered the gate, Deputy Sheriff Watterworth bade him good evening with a smile, and presented him with two writs—One for himself personally, and the other as a representative of the village. There was little business, and this was soon hurried through. After the communication was read the letter of Mr. Scatcherd relative to what action the council would take was read. On motion of Mr. Collins, it was filed.

The Reeve—Does anyone object to this being filed?

Mr. Hamilton—I have no objection, I am sure. The other people have taken all the writs.

The finance committee reported that no action be taken in the matter of refunding John Deacon's dog tax, and that Mr. Macdonald's statute labor tax and the cost connected with it be refunded. Mr. Barclay was also refunded $1, which his daughter had been wrongfully frightened into paying for a dog he didn't own. The report was adopted.

Louis Ludwig came before the council with a complaint that he had been assessed for back taxes which he had no right to pay. He said the bill was for $21. These were taxes for 1891. He said he had purchased the property until 1893, and when he did so he had been informed by Mr. Lord that there was nothing against the property. The account against the property was remitted.

Among the accounts was one from Constables Clark and Northgreaves for $3 for services on the day of the Wallace circus.

A bylaw will be prepared and ratified at a special meeting for the renewal of a $1,000 note, which falls due on Sept. 9.

The treasurer's report showed receipts for the month of August to have been $748 18, and disbursements $445 17, leaving a balance of $303 01. An order was given authorizing $170 to be drawn in favor of the school board. Adjourned.

An Eagle Eye.

Mr Winslow Has One and Makes a Fine Capture

Of a Beautiful Fish Eagle—Has Been Watching It for Two Years.

A prize that has been sought for in vain by ardent sportsmen for the past couple of years was captured yesterday by Mr. W. E. Winslow, of Boston, who is at present visiting his parents at 576 Horton street.

He succeeded in shooting, near the Port Stanley bridge, a remarkably large and magnificent specimen of the American osprey, commonly called fish eagle or fish hawk. The bird measures five and a half feet from tip to tip, and is perfectly feathered. In color it is mottled brown and white and has immense talons.

Mr. Winslow first noticed the eagle in the neighborhood of the Port Stanley bridge when visiting home two years ago, and has seen it frequently since, and for the past three weeks watched it closely, making several attempts to bag it. Other sportsmen have been after it, and Mr. Gould, of East London, has seen it for three years. It no doubt came here from the lake each season. The other day Mr. Winslow and his sister walked along the south branch of the river and saw a heron, a hawk, a hen-hawk, eleven plover, a quail, and finally the eagle he afterwards shot. This is no hunting yarn, although it may seem incredible. Such sights are not at all common in this vicinity, and it would be very hard to equal such a record as the above.

Those Writs

Stir Up Warm Feelings in London West.

An Impromptu Meeting and Strongly Worded Speeches.

Councillors Say Hard Things of the Issuers—Public Meeting Called.

It was 9:15 when the London West Council adjourned last night, and the crowd of disappointed spectators and ratepayers rose to wend their weary way to their abodes. Then ex-Reeve Spence told them to wait a minute. He stood up and in a clear voice declared himself in emphatic and unmistakable terms. He said there were many ratepayers who, upon reading the newspaper accounts of the debentures and the issuing, had come there with the view of learning something about the matter, and what action the council proposed to take in regard thereto. He for one would like to know, and he thought that an impromptu meeting should be held there and then. The time had come when the village people should take things in their own hands and do something towards making themselves felt. He said there were a few people in the village who tried to make capital out of the poor people of London West and earn a living off them. The longer this state of things the worse they seemed to get, and the time had now come for the ratepayers to take hold of the matter and cry "Stop." A threat had first been made that a writ would be served, and this was the result of the threat. It was a piece of spite.

This idea seemed to meet the approval of the whole assembly, and Mr. Ferguson was immediately elected to fill the chair. Councillor Hamilton having declined, as he was one of the concerned parties.

Mr. Ferguson called upon ex-Reeve Spence, who said he could not add much to what he had already said. He did not know why the writs had been issued, but supposed it was to make the council do something they had not done. He did not know any sensible ratepayer who would do an action of this kind—run the village into another lawsuit and eat up the finances that should go towards the permanent improvement of the village. He had been told that Mr. Parkhouse was not a ratepayer. In the writ it was set forth that the council had not provided the sinking fund. That same cock and bull story came up when he was reeve, and it was this class of talk that caused him to resign his seat. Then the very man who was at the bottom of all this was guilty of the same thing. When he sat in the reeve's chair he did not provide a sinking fund. Mr. Macdonald said he had no right to take the chair he had vacated. Mr. Macdonald had stolen the seat and usurped the power of reeve (Applause.) They should start out and hurl into oblivion such men as that.

Voices—Did they provide a sinking fund last year?

Voices—Did they ever do it?

A ratepayer said he had been present last year when a bylaw was passed to deposit $1,000 for the bank for a sinking fund, but he did not know whether or not it had ever been put there.

Councillor Duff said if they wished to know the real cause of the trouble they would have to go back to the first Monday in January. The people who had issued the writ were looking for fight, and would likely get all they wanted of it before they were through, with plenty of costs, too. He and Mr. Hamilton were Scotch enough to be stubborn, and they would fight it out. The rate struck for the present year was high enough to carry the village over any expense. He thought it was a disgraceful procedure, and they (the issuers of the writ) would probably get all they wanted. "Those people," he said, "do not own one cent's worth of property in the village, and come over here and disturb this village by plunging it into a lawsuit."

Mr. Moore was called upon, but said he did not wish to have anything to say in the matter. The people understood his sentiments pretty well.

Reeve Saunby said he had been the recipient of two writs. He did not want to salt the ratepayers and himself for debentures for 30 years at 6 per cent. He said not long ago Lambton had issued debentures which had been taken at 4 per cent and a premium. He did not understand why they should pay 1 per cent more and lose the premium. People in Detroit were taking their money out of the banks there and putting it in the banks in Windsor. The English capitalists would have to come to this country to put their money out, and consequently they would be able to issue new debentures at possibly 2 1/2 or 3 per cent at the expiration of the term of the first debentures, which were issued for twenty years at 6 per cent. He went on to say that he knew a man who had been offered $10 if he would allow his name to be attached to the writ. This man needed the money, but he was possessed of a noble soul, and had spurned the bribe and told them to do their own dirty work. The issuing of this writ he said was a mean, dirty action. To him it looked like the outcome of the last election. When he (Mr. Saunby) was elected last January there were rumors raised from a well-known source that he could not qualify, but these had no effect upon him. They had placed him there to do the village business, and he knew the people would stand by the council. So long as there was a shot in the locker he would fight it out.

Councillor Hamilton commented first on the large attendance at the quiet council meeting, and thought they were expecting something. He said he understood a great many lawyers had refused to have anything to do with the issuing of the writ, because there was not enough in it. He said it was a piece of spite, and that the document itself was one of the most complicated things he had ever seen. It made every ratepayer in the village equally responsible. If the villagers stood at the back of the man who had stood by them the people in the city would respect them. They would soon be No. 7 ward. He would fight it out. If it cost only $4 or $5 to institute a writ and the rest went down into the lawyers' pockets. He thought Mr. Moore must have been specially favored as he was the only one who didn't receive one of those nice documents. He said the issuing of these writs was ill-advised, and the man whose name appeared on the writ was a relation of one of the members of the council, who had evidently been scared into it by threat of death. He characterized the whole business as mean and dirty and he was glad the village contained one man who was noble enough to soar above a bribe and not make himself a tool for a dirty trick.

Mr. Moore said Mr. Parkhouse was relative of his, but that they had not spoken for years. He went on to say that he had always tried to vote in accordance with the Provincial Act. He thought Mr. Scarrow made a good move when he argued for the consolidation of the debt when he was in the council.

Mr. Duff—Mr. Scarrow told me he only wanted the debentures consolidated as they became due.

Mr. Moore continued, speaking of his efforts to comply with the requirements of the act providing for the establishment of a sinking fund on the consolidation of the debenture debt. He had always done business according to the act and voted that way.

Mr. Duff—That is just what the rest of the council maintained. He would rather have a relief than a punishment. He had tried hard to keep things in order, and was under the impression that he had succeeded. He saw through his scheme, and he was at the top and bottom of this action. If the council were not competent to do the business the villagers should do it. These matters had gone far enough.

Mr. Duff said that so far as being unseated was concerned, to him it would be a relief rather than a punishment. He had tried hard to keep things in order, and was under the impression that he had succeeded. He saw through his scheme, and he was at the top and bottom of this action. If the council were not competent to do the business the villagers should do it. These matters had gone far enough.

Preparations for His Visit to London Next Week.

Regulations Governing the Camp—Tommy Must Have Straight Toes—How He Fares.

Preparations for the camp are in progress at Witley Barracks. The tents will probably be pitched this week for the accommodation of the military visitors, who will start to arrive on Tuesday, Sept. 8, it is expected that about twelve hundred men will be under canvas. The 21st Batt., Essex Fusiliers, have already received the regimental orders. The train leaves Leamington at 10 a.m., and will pick up the companies between there and Warkville, leaving Warkville Junction at 11:20 a.m.

The list of officers recommended for employment on the district staff will be submitted to the general officer commanding the army on or before Sept. 5, 1896.

HOW THE BOYS FARE.

The following orders give an idea of the camp equipment and rations of the men:

Each company must provide its own cooking utensils, and one axe, spade and rake.

Officers commanding companies will make arrangements for the men under their command to bring their own rations with them for the first half day, for which 25 cents per man is allowed.

Each man must take with him the following necessities: Shoe-brush and blacking, soap, towel, needle and thread, knife, fork and spoon, tea-cup, plate, pipe, and an extra pair of shoes, two extra flannel shirts, two extra pairs woolen socks.

Each two men should provide themselves with a common straw tick, to be filled with straw at camp. The use of these ticks will add greatly to the comfort of men in camp.

The privates will receive the usual allowance of straw each day, and rations, and the officers more in proportion to their ranks.

MUST HAVE STRAIGHT TOES.

The medical regulations require the rejection of all men who show any signs of rheumatism, or other disease of the lungs, heart, or viscera, rupture or venereal disease, or who are in any way maimed, who have ill-governed habits, who are epileptic, who are short-sighted, or have any other physical defect rendering them unfit for service, or predisposing them to become non-effective under exposure. The minimum height is 5 feet 4 inches.

CHARGED BY A COW.

A London Cyclists Dilemma—His Aeolian Harp Offended the Bovine.

Music hath no charms to soothe the bovine breast! Henceforth when a cyclist takes a country spin, he had better hang his Aeolian harp upon the wall at home. Mr. Charlie Hastings, of 108 Centre street, London West, whirled over the rural highway near Byron the other evening, while the harp on his wheel sang to the breeze in sweet elastic tones and accompanied the birds, which warbled in the trees. So harmonious did everything look and sound that he little suspected the spirit of discord lurked in an innocent appearing cow on the road ahead. At the approach of music, her cowship pricked up her ears and switched her tail, while a sudden light came into her usually mild eyes. Then she lowered her stately head, and before the rider could pass her, she had both him and his wheel on her horns.

Mr. Hastings was unceremoniously dumped into the ditch. Mr. Hastings picked up himself and his bicycle, and rode on to his home. He then succeeded in escaping from her cowship, who was rallying for a second charge. She accomplished her main object, however. The harp was shattered.

They say there is now one bicyclist in London who has conceived a dislike for milk shakes, and is an earnest advocate for the debarking of cattle.

A Girl's Complaint.

Says That Frank O'Keefe, of London, Robbed Her.

O'Keefe's Career in London—Tried to Pose as a Nobleman Here—Was Married in This City.

During the whole of the summer of 1895 and a large part of last winter, a slick-looking fellow calling himself Frank Thursty, lived in the city. He wore good clothes and good jewelry. He was an artist by calling, he said, and he showed considerable skill with the brush. His specialty seemed to be the nude. He sold a few of his pictures, and appeared to have plenty of cash, which he assured his friends was not acquired wholly by would do an independent circumstances, and hinted at noble English birth. His linen was marked Sir Francis Thursty, and he had a superficial air of grandiosity that passed current with the unsuspecting. He was a smooth-shaven, smooth-talking chap, particularly attentive to the ladies. He left here in the spring, and now turns up in Detroit under his proper name, Carr, of 33 Lafayette avenue, seeks his arrest. O'Keefe secured her confidence, and finally her case—the earnings of years. In Detroit he said he was an artist with a studio at Minneapolis; that he was very rich, and had an allowance of $450 a month. His remittances (?) were often late, and he borrowed money to meet himself until they arrived. Miss Carr says that he was formerly an attendant at the London Asylum, and that he was beaten by a patient. Some of his friends say he never recovered from the effects, and that the injury accounts for his since wayward career. About six years ago he married a domestic at Helmut College, but they are living apart. He has wandered over the continent, living by his wits since then.

While in London O'Keefe boarded on Park avenue, and so far as known behaved himself here, and left no debts unpaid. He is very respectably connected.

WIFE VS. HUSBAND

Mrs. E. Bevin and Her Husband Not an Agreeable Pair.

Elijah Bevin, of London West, was a prisoner in the dock at the Police Court this morning. When his name was called Mr. Frank Love said Mrs. Bevin wished him to ask the clemency of the court on her husband's behalf. This did not meet the views of the police magistrate, and Mrs. Bevin was called. She said her husband had gone away and left her for over two months. While he had gone she sent a telegram to him, and after he had come back she had gone out one day, and in her absence he had tried to evict the roomers.

Mrs. Bevin said on her husband's return he had given the child 25 cents and herself 50 cents. She was only afraid of him when he got drunk. She didn't want to live in poverty and annoyance all her life.

The Police Magistrate—Do you want him bound over to keep the peace?

Mrs. Bevin said she didn't want to be bound on him if he would behave himself.

Bevin (from the dock to his wife in the witness box)—Didn't you tell me the other day that if I came home you would give me a room to myself and that you couldn't do without me?

Mr. Love said the wife would be satisfied if it were possible to stay away from her and contributed to the support of his child.

The magistrate bound the prisoner over to two sureties of $50 each to keep the peace.

"I can't find them, sir," said the prisoner. "You had better send me down for two years."

James E. Graham, charged with robbing the mails, was remanded for a week.

The Thousand Islands With-drawn from Sale.

A Scandalous Transaction by the Late Government.

Significant Investigation Now in Progress.

(Special Telegram to The Advertiser.)

Ottawa, Sept. 2.—It is learned that the present Government have withdrawn the Thousand Islands from sale, with the view of their being acquired by the Government of Ontario for park purposes. It will be remembered that the Hon. Mr. Daly placed these islands in the market, against the protest of the public. A large number of the islands were acquired by the friends of the late Government, one of which was purchased by Hon. John Haggart, through Mr. Alexander Ferguson, of this city. The island was sold for $900, although over $1,000 had been paid for it by J. T. Craig, Toronto. The deal was put through by the Deputy Minister of Indian Affairs. As soon, however, as Mr. T. B. R. Burdick, who claimed the pre-emptive right to purchase the island, found out that it had been purchased for the Hon. Mr. Haggart, he pressed his claim, and the department sold him a reserved island, which was valued at $1,000, for something like $200. Had the late Government accepted the proposition of the Ontario Government to sell the islands at a fair valuation, the public here this would have had the benefit of them as a public park, and the Indians would have realized on them, whereas now the best islands have been disposed of, while the poor islands and rocks remain, and the Indians will only receive something like $20,000, less all the expenses of advertising. It will now be necessary for the Ontario Government to appropriate in the case of those islands which have been sold and are being held by speculators.

In the debates committee today the conduct of three French translators—Vanasse, MacLeod and La Salle—for interfering in the late elections, was under review. Vanasse admitted that he had said in Richelieu county that Laurier and Deaneau were traitors to their race and religion. La Salle and MacLeod denied certain charges which were made against them, and the case was further postponed. A charge was also laid against Joseph Boudreau. His case will come up at the next meeting. It is acknowledged generally that all of these parties were more or less engaged in politics, but what the committee wants to get at is if they were offensive partisans. When the Conservative Government tried those translators who were Liberals, no examination was made into the case, Mr. Chapleau securing their dismissal without any investigation.

Mr. Robt. Spittal, of this city, was registered at the Balmoral, Montreal, on Monday.
