shorthand as early as the third century, and in Egypt. A recently discovered papyrus which Dr. Grenfell described at the meeting of the Egypt exploration fund yesterday was a contract between a shorthand teacher and a gentleman who wished one of his aves to acquire the art. The fee was 120 drachmae, forty to be paid on apprenticeship, forty at the end of a year, and the balance when the slave was proficient. Shorthand writing was then presumably not so easy of attainment as it is now. Among the other documents of the Oxyrhychus Papyri is the account of a fatal accident and of the body of the victim being examined by the coroner of the day in company with a public physician. That dates back to the second century of PRIVATE AND TRUST FUNDS TO loan at 4%c to 5% per cent on real estate security, in sums to suit. No commission charged. T. W.  Gladstone's Parents.

One of the most striking and pleasant evelations of this book is the greatless of the debt that he owed to his father, whose striking portrait Mr. Morley very appropriately places at the opening of the first volume. To be the son have in this way ample means, yet with-out the dangers which often accompany ample means-was an immense advantage cretion, the learned judge came to the conclusion that the judgment of the court below must be reversed, and the and Christ Church, advantages which Disraeli, as appears again and again in his novels, always coveted; his father who made him work at Oxford and en-couraged him at the Union; and who, when he wrote, just before his degree, the wonderful and deeply characteristic letter proposing to give up a worldly career and take holy orders, tendered what was probably the best, and certainly the kindest advice that could be given. Their relations indeed were ideal; nor is It to be wondered at, when we read what should have called the father "the most or that his eyes should have filled with tears as he spoke of him in his family, and exclaimed: "None but his children can know what torrents of tenderness flowed from his heart." But his devotion to his mother was no less active. When the family were in London, and he, a young man, was in the first intoxicating flush of his wonderful career, he never, we read, "allow ed any other engagement to interrupt his sedulous attendance on her every day, reading the Bible to her and telling the news about levees and drawing-rooms, a great dinner at Sir Robert Peel's, and all the rest of his business and recrea-

-Spectator's review of Morley's Strange Things to Steal.

Somewhere in St. Louis is concealed a agents have had their eyes peeled for the job, and that a pavement will be urer presented their reports, which he must have the minnows with him man who has stolen 15,000 minnows; and were approved and adopted. Mrs. Wal- since they can be found nowhere. Next clusion. As is usual when pavements ler, wife of Principal Waller, of Huron are mooted, there is a difference of College, was present, and delivered a stone, one would think 15,000 minnows stone, one would think 15,000 minnows would be the hardest thing to steal, But nothing is safe. Still, we may be cheerof the majority of the residents of the street are in favor of asphalt blocks, though not a few want the straight asphalt. Speaking of Queen's thanks to Mrs. Waller, and also to the stolen diamond sunburst and necklaces stolen diamond sunburst and necklaces and solitaire rings which our fellowcitizens seem to own chiefly for the pleasurable excitement of having them stolen. What a dull life this would be to some if they were not the happy owners of a chamois bag full of gems. Not one flutter beyond the ordinary in a whole decade of one's existence, except the occasional visit of a porch climber, the burglar, or the frequent theft by the trusted house servant. And only a languid thrill to the public in the everrecurrent list where the two rhinestone earrings, the mother-of-pearl stickpin, the turquoise bracelet of pale blue glass, the rolled plate cuff-buttons are listed in the papers. When it is 15,000 minnows stolen, it is quite different. This puts It shows a novelty of conception and an attention to detail in perpetration. Every theft done in St. Louis is marked by peculiar features, in which it resembles may trace it to its author. But the stealing of 15,000 minnows stands alone. It has no precedent. It becomes a freak in criminal history. It is corroboration of criminal history. It is corroboration of the theory that theft is due to sudden recurring aberrations, in which the victim takes the first thing he can carry off. It may be a barrel of tar, or a doorplate. a bucket of molasses, a parrot, or 15,000 minnows. Insanity is about the only minnows.
