day yesterday. The rebels fought despedown. Later advises from Trinkitat give the following information: The rebels were found in force with two guns mounted at an old fort three miles from Fort Baker. Firing opened on both sides and lasted a long time. The rebels finally retreated after 1000 of their men had been killed. The British losses were twenty-four killed and 142 wounded. The British captured four Krupp guns, two howitzers and one Thursday night Gen. Graham's expedition encamped near Fort Baker. The troops were all assembled before sunset, point a piece of shell wounded Baker Pasha and twenty men were hit. After an echelon of a thousand yards a halt was ordered and the men directed to lie down. It was now noonday, clear, and the winds dispersed the smoke of the rebel fire, disclosing the rebels' movements. Then the British opened fire with guns and Martini rifles, crusing the rebel fire to rapidly slacken and almost cease. At this the bugles again sounded an advance. The troops rose, wheeled on the centre of the square and approached the rebel works. The rebels were in no military order, but scattered here and there, so as to take advantage of the abundant cover which the ground afforded. They clung to their position with desperate tenacity.

The rebels fell right and let's, though some of the brave fellows reached within five paces of the square. They only fell back suddenly when they were forced. Having cleared the ground in front with their Martini rifles, the British attacked the fort. Col. Burnaby was the first to mount the parapet, firing a double-barrelied shotgun into the enemy.

Around the works the rebels fought with furious energy, and a frightful melec bayonets and spears took place. At last the British gained possession of the fort. They captured two Krupp guns and at once turned them against the enemy, but the Arabs still contested every inch. They directed their attention to an old sugar mill—a brick building containing an iron boiler. This they stormed and succeeded in dislodging 200 rebels, who leaped the fort and charged from every opening. At 10 o'clock, after an hour of intense fighting the rebels gave way and bolted outright. Gatling guns and Martini rifles had caused great havoc there. The British pursued the rebels as they fell back and advanced as far as the fresh water wells of Teb, where the rebels made their wells of Teb, where the rebels made their last stand. Sheikhs, who advanced empty handed to show that they bore charmed lives, were stricken down with bayonet thrusts. The Highlanders carried the next earthwork, capturing three guns. At the end of four hours' arduous fighting the British gained possession of the rebel camp of huts and wells. ANOTHER LONG ISLAND OUTRAGE. Fatally Injured by a Negro.

WESTBURY, L. I., March 1.—Mary

Brown is 13 years old, the adopted daughter of Mrs. Sarah Willis. She was rudely assailed to-day by Chas. Bunn, a heavy, thick set negro. Late in the afternoon the girl was sent to the village postoffice, about a mile from her home, for the mail. She was on her way home, and when in the most unfrequented part of this road Bunn suddenly sprang from behind the hedge and grasping her by the throat with one hand, stifled her cries with the other and dragged her behind the bushes. Hours later the little girl was found there insensible. He clothes were in tatters. But for timely discovery the unfortunate child would have frozen to death. Her condition is critical and the chances of her recovery are very doubtful. Bunn is still at large, and every effort is being made to capture him.
