THE GREAT CAUSE OF HUMAN MISERY.

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cause (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Inactivity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

POPULARITY OF THE AYRSHIRES.

As a sign of the returning popularity of the valuable Ayrshire cattle might be cited the fact, that at the fair of the New York State Agricultural Society, the Ayrshires outnumbered the herefore preponderating Jerseys.

The Ayrshire, as a butter-making breed, is hardly a rival of the Jerseys; these two should be companions, and not rivals, for each one has invaluable points.

A fact of curious significance also, at the fair, was the absence of several of the old successful show-herds, and the entry of new exhibitors, who carried off the honors.

It is further worthy of remark that, with all our success in breeding excellent animals, our prize takers are too frequently imported.

Would it not be well to keep prizes only for native bred animals?—American Agriculturist.

FEEDING FOR MILK.

"Litchfield." The most economical food for milch cows is a mixture of hay, meal, and bran; and the most economical way of feeding these is to cut the hay, moisten it, and sprinkle the meal and bran over it.

This is a very good mixture, and, in our practice, we believe 25 per cent of the feed is saved.

One bushel-basket of out hay, and 2 1/2 quarts of corn meal and bran, mixed in equal portions, is a feed for a cow in good milk.

To some cows more of the meal and bran may be given profitably; this must be found by testing the different cows.

The above feed is for half a day—that is, given twice in the day, making a quart of the meal and bran daily. In addition to the above feed, a few pounds of dry hay, or some roots, may be given at noon.

THE POTATO CROP IN CALIFORNIA.

The California correspondent of the Boston "Journal" says:—

"The idea seems almost preposterous that vegetables are raised in California which a strong man can't lift but so it is. Down in Los Angeles it is a common thing to raise pumpkins weighing from 200 to 320 pounds, and a single vine has produced the past year in that section 1,400 pounds of pumpkins.

The growth of vegetables in this State is wonderful, and the yield in numerous instances is enormous. There are potatoes in this market which grew on land yielding 500 bushels to the acre.

There is a man who has raised the past season on Grand Island, Colusa county, in the central portion of the State, an immense crop of tubers. His field comprised 400 acres, and his total yield is 34,000 sacks of large potatoes (125 pounds to the sack on an average), and about 400 tons of small ones, or in all some 4,250,000 pounds. They embrace several kinds, but they are mostly Humboldt Red, which is considered the best, Early Rose and Peach Blows.

The large potatoes are sent to markets, and the small ones he uses for seed and feed. The average price he gets for them is 1 1/2 cents a pound, and at this rate he will get $63,750 for his large potatoes. If he gets $10 a ton for his small potatoes he will receive an additional amount of $4,000 or $7,750 for his entire crop.

But wonderful as this yield is the product is larger down in the coast counties, I am told, than elsewhere in the State. Sweet potatoes are also grown successfully."

A NEW LIFE-BOAT.

One of the great wants of the present day, when so many delicate women and children go down to the sea in ships, is some kind of life-boat which will live on the ocean for an unlimited length of time, in any weather, and at the same time protect its passenger from the inclemency of the elements.

Mr. J. Manes, of New Haven, Connecticut, U. S., seems to have hit upon a plan which meets every want of shipwrecked people. His boat consists of a hollow globe of metal or wood, blasted at the bottom, so that it will always right itself immediately on touching the water, and can never capsize, even in the roughest sea.

This boat has compartments for water, medical stores, and provision, bulwarks to let in the light, a door for ingress and egress, a port-hole for hoisting signals to the mast, comfortable seats around the inside for the passengers, and a double hollow mast for supplying fresh air, and for carrying off that which has become vitiated. On the outside of the globe, boats are attached, for the use of sailors in rowing, hoisting sail, discharge rockets, or steering. Of course, the case would be very rare when rowing, sailing or steering would be required, but in case of need, all three could be easily managed. The passengers would be protected from rain and wind, and consequently to a great extent, from cold; this is a very important point in Mr. Manes' design, as we all know that very many persons, not merely women and children, but often heavy men, only escape drowning to perish from exposure to the weather. Mr. Manes suggests that a propeller might be attached to the boat to be worked by a crank turned by the passengers on the inside. It is calculated that a boat, twelve feet in diameter, would carry about fifty passengers. This boat can be carried on deck on hung over the stern on davits, in either of which position it may be used as a cabin during the voyage, and further, if hung on an universal point like a compass, it would retain its equilibrium no matter what the motion of the ship might be, thus affording a safe retreat for persons subject to sea-sickness.

We saw a young man with two heads on his shoulder the other day, but did not consider it much of a curiosity. One belonged to his girl.—Berkshire Courier.

John's Corner.

A SOLID CAUSE AT LAST.

An Irish matron enters a lawyer's office, 'Is this the place, sur, where people get divorces?'

'Yes, occasionally we engage in the kind of business. What can we do for you, madam?'

'Faith, sur, I'd loike to git a divorce from me husband Patrick.'

'What is the matter with Patrick, madam?'

'Shure and Patrick gits drunk, sur.'

'That's bad. But I hardly think that alone will be a sufficient cause. Have you no other complaint?'

'Indeed I have, sur; Patrick bates me.'

'Yes, yes, I see. That adds cruelly to drunkenness. But, madam, you do not seem to suffer much in appearance from Patrick's cruelty. I think you must find a stronger reason before the Court will grant you a divorce.'

'Well, sur, besides all that, I fear, sur, that Patrick isn't thrue to me.'

'Business. What reason have you for thinking that Patrick is unfaithful to you?'

'Well, sur, I may say that's meself that has a strong suspicion that Patrick is not the father of me last child.—Harford Times.

THAT FETCHED HIM.

In one of the Western States a man was brought into court on a charge of assault and battery, presented by his wife, and his honor asked him why he struck her.

'She called me a worthless, lazy loafer; but it wasn't that.'

'Well?'

'She said our whole family weren't fit for fish bait; but I didn't get mad at that.'

'What was it then?'

'She shook her fist under my nose and said I was too lazy to die; but I knowed she was excited, and I let that pass. She's got a fearful temper your honor.'

'I wish to know if you had sufficient cause for provocation, said the Court.'

'I guess I had, Judge. She came close up and spit in my face, and said I was meaner than pison; but I didn't hit her for that.'

'What then?'

'I knowed her temper, and I set there and whistled "Hold the Fort," and I was bearing with her, when she turned round, gin my coat down the smashing kick, lifted him right out doors over his head. That fetched me. Judge, if there had been forty lions and a camel in the road, I'd have skinned her or died trying.—Henderson Times.

'Have you any old clothes, mum, as you could give a poor man who has a sick wife and six small children to support?' inquired a dilapidated person at the door of a West End residence.

'I've got a coat with but three buttons gone, and a pair of pantaloons that've got a small patch behind, which I guess you can have,' said the good woman after she had examined the closet.

'Is the coat double-breasted, with velvet collar?' inquired the poor man.

'Are the pantaloons of a plaid pattern, and cut with spring bottoms of twenty-two inches?'

'No, sir.' Then I guess you needn't trot 'em out, said the poor man; 'they ain't my style, and I don't want 'em.'

'I'm not going on any more of these excursion rides to Boston,' said a young man from New Hampshire on a crowded train. 'There's such a crowding and hounding nobody can tell what he's about. Here I've lost my wife and my cane; such a nice new cane, too!' he added, dolefully.

She stepped out of the cars a few minutes, leaving a book on the seat, but on returning went to the wrong seat and inquired of a placid old lady, 'Are you sitting on "That Husband of Mine"?' 'Good gracious! No!' exclaimed the old lady, jumping up and scanning the seat with rigid scrutiny.

Under a ruling of the Ohio courts, no parents have a right to enter the room in which their daughter is sparkling without asking and obtaining her consent. The parent can, however, put his or her mouth to the keyhole of the room, and say, 'I'll give that chap two minutes in which to get it!'—Free Press.

No one can better appreciate the fact that the world is full of hollow mockeries than the man who prepares a lecture with the title "How to Get Rich," and then cannot make enough by it to pay his hotel bills.

A party of gentlemen were talking about courting, and one of them sadly said he should never risk that kind of thing. 'Why so?' was the exclamation. 'Because,' said he, 'I am Harris has just courted investigation, and it's ruined him.'

A sad capitalist invaded the Hawkeye office the other day. He makes the remark that the new silver dollar was too heavy for a coin, and not heavy enough for a hitching-weight.'

If the man who made a mistake last evening in the matter of umbrellas will call at this office he will be welcome to all he can hear to his advantage.—Worcester Press.
