

PAUL'S DEFENCE (Acts 22, 23)--IN ISAAC PITMAN'S PHONOGRAPHY.
(Written by Thos. Bengough, Official Reporter, 1878 County Courts.)

The first time that I was ever brought before a court, I was charged with the murder of a man named Sosthenes. I was then confined in prison for some time, and during that period I was visited by a certain man named Agrippa, who was the governor of the province.
 He came to see me, and after having conversed with me for some time, he said to me, "I have heard
 of thee, and I would fain
 know thee more fully."
 Then he commanded that I should be brought before him. And when I was brought before him, he said, "I have heard of thee, and I would fain know thee more fully." Then he
 Then he said to me, "I have heard of thee, and I would fain know thee more fully." Then he said to me, "I have heard of thee, and I would fain know thee more fully." Then he said to me, "I have heard of thee, and I would fain know thee more fully." Then he
