

II. Manufactures, Work in Stone, Work in Wood, Painting, Preparation of Skins, Basketry, Matting, Weaving and Netting.

III. House and Household : Habitations, House-furnishings.

IV. Clothing and Ornaments.

V. Subsistence : Varieties and preparation of food, Preservation of staple foods, Dishes, Seasons, Hunting, Fishing.

VI. Travel and Transportation, Trade.

VII. Warfare.

VIII. Games and Pastimes.

IX. Sign Language.

X. Social Organization and Festivals.

XI. Customs relating to Birth, Childhood, Marriage and Death.

XII. Religion : Observances, Shamanism.

XIII. Medicines : Surgical Operations, Charms, Current Beliefs.

XIV. Art : Decorative, Music, Dance, by Franz Boas, who is the editor of the book.

XV. Conclusions. by Franz Boas.

The work is printed on fine book paper, in large quarto size, and makes part of Volume Second of the Memoirs of the American Museum of Natural History, pp. 163-392.

The same volume also contains :

1st. Facial Paintings of the Indians of British North America, by Franz Boas. Pages 1-24, with six full page plates.

2nd. The Mythology of the Bella

Cooia Indians, by Franz Boas. Pages 25-127, thirteen plates.

3rd. Archæology of Lytton, British Columbia, by Harlan I. Smith. Pages 129-162, one plate.

We have also received a copy of "The Archæology of the Thompson River Region," by Harlan I. Smith. Fifty pages, profusely illustrated.

Mr. Jas. Teit is also the author of the "Traditions of the Thompson Indians of British Columbia," published by the American Folk-Lore Society in 1898, an 8vo volume of 140 pages.

We quote the following from the Kamloops "Inland Sentinel" of December 4, 1900 :

"Indian agent Irwin returned Sunday from a three week's visit among the Indians. Mr. Irwin visited about twelve reserves. In all the Indians generally, were found to be well provided for the winter, having harvested good crops. The tribes were also in good health, there being but very little sickness among them."

"Mr. Irwin reports that the Indians are becoming more industrious each year, and are getting to be expert husbandmen and are taking a more intelligent interest in farming than ever before, and the past year saw a greater acreage under cultivation than ever previously. They devote themselves less to the chase than in former years. Doubtless this is due in a great measure to the ever increas-