

enlightened his judgment to the best of his ability, the mandate of conscience was never disregarded. We often thought he was conscientious to a fault, but surely the word "fault" is misplaced in such a connection. To-day he is no doubt reaping the rich reward of his fidelity while here. During his course in Toronto, he superintended a mission at York Mills, some seven miles from the city. He superintended the Sunday School, taught the Bible class, and looked after the preaching for the space of five years. All his spare time from his studies was spent in working up this mission. He visited the people from house to house to get the children to the school and the people to the church. Many a time has he walked out and back those seven miles through the worst of weather, besides walking about for miles through the neighborhood to visit the people. When he first went there there was no school, and the church was about defunct, and the building fast falling into decay. Now there is a flourishing school, and a prosperous church meeting in a comfortable building, while there is a settled pastor, who not unfrequently visits the baptismal waters. Quite often Brother Yule would have to preach himself, besides all his other work. Moreover, all this work was undertaken and carried out perfectly voluntarily on his part. It was without money and without price. It was a work and labor of love, and the Lord blessed him in it.

His constitution, however, was not able to stand such increasing mental and physical labor. About the time he graduated, it began to decline. The theological department of our Institute was very much in need of an additional professor about this time, and he was at once sought to fill the new position. All were delighted at the thought of securing his able services in the department of Greek Exegesis and Evidences, and when he accepted the position the highest expectations were awakened with respect to the success which would attend his efforts. The Lord, however, had other things arranged. Prof. Yule had no more than fairly started into his work, when strong indications of that fatal disease—con-
