

thought of, which would enable a more gradual change, more success would result. For instance, send the boys onto fruit farms the first year and leave dairying to the second year. Working among fruit trees and vegetables is not such a change as working among pigs and cows.

As far as the selection of farms is concerned I know that some were not really selected, my own case being an example.

Hoping that Mr^s Martin is well
yours very sincerely,
Patrick M. Grove.