The passenger traffic on the lake wats has almost doubled. The hottest place within the city limits was along the Esplanade. Here the sun streamed down unmercifully, even worse than it did higher up in the city. Added to the heat of the day was the dirty smoke emerging in great quantities from the engine mokestacks and dropping its black cutting cinders into the eyes of the passerby. The fires in the engines seemed to be at least three or four times hotter than usual. It is hard work for the firemen to breath at any time, but yesterday they were almost prostrated and raised a prayer of iks where they were able to quit.
