"Glory Quayle."—So glad you mentioned the Ruskin pottery bowl like "an overgrown soap bubble," also the pencil sketches in the narrow black frames. I know the temperament of of the room exactly. All it seems to lack is the touch of chintz to ease the severity and assure its unlikeness to the other "parlors" of the district which you picture as "so strictly proper with their starched lace curtains and full-size enlargements of all their dear departed." One has in mind a certain cretonne with pink roses, green leaves and suggest would only add to the dull effect. As you intend to paint over the brown, you will find two coats of cream neces sary, I expect. In the room with the graining which is so chipped I would again suggest fream paint, as this will barmonize with your brown stair-case without any trouble, and will look so much brighter and better altogether than brown. You will need to first use some Paint Remover—85c a quart—to remove the graining, and then one or two coats of cream paint. I shall be very glad to give you suggestions regarding your rugs and curtains, but before doing this should need to know a little more about your room. Is it a sitting room and is it light? What furniture have you, and about how much do you wish to spend or redecorating it? With this information at my disposal I shall be able to give you practical help, and shall be very interested in choosing pretty things for you."

"Raggs."—Garters for gardener(esses)? Why, Jes., of course. Ask for the "Treo" girdle, which consists of a webbing belt, to which are attached four wide suspenders of strong slastic with nickel clasps. It is worn around the waist, of course, and obviates all the varied discomforts experienced with a round garter. It is ideal for wear with camping togs or any costume with which no corset is worn. The price is $1.25, and it may be had in sizes 20 to 30 waist measure.
