A QUEER PATIENT.—A physician was called in a few months ago; not many miles from Halifax, to administer to the sufferings of a patient. After feeling his pulse, examining his tongue, &c., the Doctor prepared to give him a dose of medicine, which the patient refused to take. The physician then proposed bleeding him; to which the sick man replied, that he could not consent to that neither,—for said he,

Secondly.—A farmer should take a newspaper for the sake of his children. If he would not have them grow up in ignorance of what is passing at home and abroad—if he would prepare them for a proper discharge of their duties as citizens, he owes to them to give them the benefit of this regular instructor, coming into the family without bustle or pretence, and performing its office without delay. There is a vast amount of intelligence condensed in the narrow limits of a well senducted paper. Much of this can be obtained in no other way, and
