Empire, an exodus item is the most grateful thing that the editor of the Globe can find to publish. Last evenin the Globe came forward with its usua converted Indians all over America, and it is a rather singular proof of the fact that Christianty has little effect on the Indian nature, that we find that Mr. Wilson's two boys who displayed them selves on the platform last evening, showed as much proficiency in the war dance as they did with the texts of the bible. While we would not desire in any respect to impede the spread of Christianity among the Indians it must occur to many that the efforts that are being made in behalf of these savages might be more usefully directed.

This means that Mr. Ellis believes the

that he can make an easier living and do better for himself by going to some large city and engaging there as laborer or a servant of some one else. That this idea is fallacious in general is abundantly proved by new arrange of the such feelings are found being.
