

ANNUAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

1876-77.

In publishing this their second announcement since assuming the position of an independent body, the Faculty of the Halifax Medical College take great pleasure in stating that they feel much encouragement from the success which has attended their efforts; and believe that the results prove the course adopted by them to have been a judicious one. The class during the past Session was fully equal in all respects to that of previous years, and, owing to improved accommodation, the general conduct of the course was much more satisfactory than formerly. The new College Building has been found in every way well suited to the purpose for which it was erected, and affords facilities for teaching not surpassed by any Medical School in the Dominion.

As a medical centre Halifax enjoys those advantages for the study of rare forms of disease which find their way to important seaports. In this respect it surpasses every other City in the Dominion, as, being an open port during the winter, it is a resort for shipping at that season, when the others are by nature debarred therefrom. The Provincial and City Hospital is supplied constantly from this source, while it receives a yet greater number of cases from all parts of the Province, affording the student an extended field for observation. In addition to this, he has thrown open with him the resources of the Provincial Alms House, its large infirmary of chronic and incurable diseases, its lying in wards for instruction in obstetrics, &c., and the City Dispensary, with its large attendance, among which he may study minor surgery, affections of the eye and ear, and the various forms of disease that make up the routine work of the practitioner of Medicine.

During the past year the School of Science was affiliated with the Halifax Medical College, and the lectures in that department were attended by quite a large number of Students. The success of this Institution is due in a very large degree to the energy and professional ability of Dr. Honeyman. The class list appears at a future part of this announcement.

In continuing the prosecution of their endeavour to furnish a sound Medical Education, the Faculty have to state that no effort will be spared to keep the standard of teaching on a level with the present state of Medical Science.
