ABSENT MINDED.

"Higgins got lost the other day right here in the city."

"Well, that's funny. Always lived here too."

"Yes, but you see, it was caused by an election bet. The party that lost was to wear his trousers back side before for a week. Higgins lost and dressed accordingly. He always was an absent minded fellow, and yesterday when he left his office the matter had slipped his mind. Happening to look down he noticed the back of his trousers and thought he was going in the wrong direction—away from home. Well, he turned around and I'll be blamed if he didn't get six miles out in the country before night. When it got so dark that he couldn't see himself he gradually got straightened around."

NEW WHAT IT WAS.

A doctor once took a tippling Scotchman to task, and graphically described for his benefit the effects of over-indulgence, adding:—

"Think of what physical pain a man suffers after drinking—the aching brow, the parched throat, the trembling nerves."

Whereupon Sandy interrupted him with:—

"Gie's yer han', doctor, man! Ve describe the sensations sae well that I think it's no' the first time ye've been fou yersel'."
