While not insisting on the accuracy of the figures, they claim there is good reason to believe that a severe check was inflicted on the Japanese in front of Port Arthur, and it is considered possible that General Stoessel may have made a report on the subject to the emperor, who will not return here until tonight. Although still in ignorance as to what the official statement meant by "from Japanese sources," the official statement meant by "from Japanese sources," the officials here maintain that Alexieff must have had good reason to send the report. While it is conceivable that the Japanese themselves may have spread the report for the purpose of leading General Kuropatkin to believe that they will not advance any further in Manchuria, the general staff are not disposed to regard them as gullty of such machiavelism.
