DEEP DOWN;

A Tale of the Cornish Mines.

"Mr. Ballantyne always accomplishes in a creditable manner the thing that he intends to do, and on this occasion he does not show himself lower than his reputation."—Athenæum.

"Mr. Ballantyne's book will not fail to delight boys, for it is full of deeds of daring and of 'hairbreadth escapes.'"—Scotsman.

"By reading Mr. Ballantyne's admirable story a very large amount of knowledge concerning Cornish mines may be acquired; whilst from the fact of the information being given in the form of a connected narrative, it is not likely very soon to be forgotten. . . A book well worthy of being extensively read."—Mining Journal.

THE FLOATING LIGHT OF THE GOODWIN SANDS.

"To enable him to write thus Mr. Ballantyne lived some time on board one of these vessels; and, though we cannot profess to judge from the same standpoint, he seems to have caught the characters admirably. The tale will be especially interesting to adventure-loving boys."—Record.

SHIFTING WINDS;

A Tough Yarn.

"This capital book, 'Shifting Winds,' is not a tough yarn, but a hearty, vigorous, bracing story, fresh with the pure breezes, and sparkling with the bright waters of the everlasting seas."—Athenæum.

THE LIGHTHOUSE;

Being the Story of a Great Fight between Man and the Sea.

Extract Letter from the Secretary of Northern Lighthouses (England).

" . . . They (the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses) have been so much pleased with the way in which you have combined the fiction of a tale with the popular but correct account of the building of the Bell Rock Lighthouse, that they think it would be an interesting work to transmit to their Lightkeepers, and I have therefore to request that you will direct your publishers to transmit to me — copies.

(Signed)

"ALEX. CUNNINGHAM."

"Thoroughly at home in subjects of adventure, the Author has made this, like all his stories for boys, smart in style, thrilling in interest, and abounding in incidents of every kind."—Quiver.
